Hitler Orders More Ships to Spanish Waters; U. S., World Tense as Nazi Shells Wreck Almeria

Town Shambles As 5 War Craft Leave 100 Dead

Roosevelt Studies Reports in N. Y.

Spanish Envoy Flying From Coast to Ask Federal Policy.

By Sidney Olson.

Lights burned late in the State Department last night as fresh dispatches from Spain brought news of one of the gravest threats of a major war in all the tense years since the World War.

Reflecting the international concern over the German reprisal bombing of the quiet loyalist port of Almeria, all major embassies here were standing by for word of new developments as Washington's holiday doldrums were split wide open by the news.

The Spanish Embassy announced that either Minister-Counselor Enrique de la Casa or the Spanish Ambassador, Fernando de los Rios, now flying to Washington from Los Angeles, will visit Secretary of State Cordell Hull for an expression of American policy on the incident.

Cancels Vacation.

Hull, his Virginia week-end broken off by the dispatches from Walter C. Thurston, American charge d'affaires at Valencia, Spanish Loyalist capital, hurried back to the State Department yesterday to watch the situation.

In Hyde Park, N. Y., at the temporary White House, President Roosevelt studied the news in evident anxiety, reports said.

The foremost American consideration, officials said, was whether the incidents justified application to Germany of provisions of the new neutrality act of 1937, signed by the President a month ago.

Under the act, the President is empowered to ban shipments of arms, munitions and implements of war to Germany, and may even prohibit American travel on German ships.

Effective Provision.

The latter is considered here a most effective provision as American tourists had been expected to spend heavily this year in travel to Europe on Nazi boats. If Italy were included, as some observers believed entirely possible, both countries would feel the pinch keenly, as foreign moneys are severely needed in each nation.

Senators William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, and Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, agreed yesterday that "an act of war has been committed." Each also insisted that the United States "remain completely aloof" from the situation, other than to invoke neutrality laws.

At the Spanish Embassy, handsome, black-haired De la Casa, in a statement attacking German claims in the Deutschland incident as "without justification," stated:

"This lawless and cruel attack by the regular German naval forces, confessedly under orders of their government, upon the civil population of a Spanish city would have been considered by everyone a deliberate act of war if the fundamentals of international law as recognized for centuries past were still respected."

Takes Direct Issue.

De la Casa's statement took direct issue with the claims of the Nazi officials here. While Dr. Hans Thomsen, of the German Embassy, insisted that the fact the German bluejackets on the Deutschland were lounging in quarters below was sufficient evidence of the battleship's peaceableness, De la Casa made a series of points in evidence against the claim, asserting:

"The Deutschland, anchored in the harbor of Iviza, 200 meters from the pier, opened strong anti-aircraft fire without provocation upon two government planes engaged in an observation flight over the Balearic Islands."

He noted that the Deutschland was anchored in the harbor "in direct violation of the non-inter-ven-

Refugee-Jammed Port in Ruins; Bodies Piled in Streets.

Almeria, Spain, May 31.—Five German warships today virtually wiped out this fortified loyalist seaport, killing nearly 100 persons, in reprisal for the loyalist bombing of the German "pocket battleship" Deutschland.

(Almeria's population normally was 45,000, but it was almost doubled by an influx of refugees after Spanish rebels captured Malaga.)

The Loyalist government at Valencia announced that it was prepared to defend itself in a "war" with Germany.

From Berlin came calm admission of the bombardment and a statement that Chancellor Hitler would "ask no further restitution or make any further claims" to avenge the Deutschland's 24 dead and 73 wounded.

War Scare Sweeps Europe.

The Deutschland was bombed by two Loyalist planes Saturday as she lay at anchor in the rebel-held harbor of Iviza in the Balearics.

The destruction of Almeria, whose streets tonight were heaped with debris and the bodies of men, women and children, precipitated Europe's worst war scare in 23 years.

Almeria was a shambles. The bodies of 36 dead, including many children, had been recovered and 100 others were missing. Most of the missing were believed to be entombed in the piles of brick and mortar that lay everywhere. Scores were injured, 65 seriously.

There is hardly a section of the town that is not in ruins, pulverized by more than 200 shells from the big guns of the German warships which steamed into the broad harbor in battle array in the flush of a red-streaked Mediterranean dawn.

It was erroneously reported, in the wave of terror and indignation that spread over all Loyalist Spain, that German troops had been landed at Almeria after the bombardment.

Deny Warship Crippled.

Reports that Loyalist coastal batteries had disabled the battle cruiser Admiral Scheer, sister ship of the crippled Deutschland, with one of their 70 shots were denied in Berlin.

When the Nazi sea raiders had disappeared under cover of a smoke screen toward Melilla, rebel base in Spanish Morocco across the Straits of Gibraltar, soldiers and citizens joined in pulling dead and wounded from the wreckage.

Loyalist defenders in the Almeria fortifications resisted the German naval bombardment until their ammunition was exhausted or their shore batteries were silenced. Official German naval reports indicated the Almeria coast defenses were put out of action early in the engagement.

Eyewitnesses of the bombardment gave accounts of the horror during the early-morning surprise attack.

"Men, women and children were roused from their sleep by the crash of shells. They ran hysterically up and down the streets trying to find shelter," a young man said.

He told how women and their children sought refuge in cellars. Their havens became their tombs when crashing walls blocked doors and other exits.

"Houses collapsed on all sides and there was no escape," the witness said, adding that Almeria, "although it was a fortified city years ago, has no military objectives of any kind."

Basques Repulsed In Counter-Attack On Strategic Hill

With Insurgent Troops Near Orduna, May 31 (AP).—A force of 500 insurgents beat back a Basque counter-attack on strategic San Pedro Hill, overlooking Orduna, in a fierce five-hour battle today.

Striking at the southernmost part of the lines facing Bilbao, the government forces, estimated by insurgents at about 3,000, drove Gen. Franco's troops from their position, only to be hurled back in a hand-to-hand encounter.

Almeria Bombardment Assailed by McConnell

New York, May 31 (AP).—Methodist Bishop Francis J. McConnell, chairman of the North American committee to aid Spanish democracy, today condemned the German bombardment of Almeria, Spain, as "aggression" and barbarity scarcely paralleled in all history" and urged Americans to protest the act to the German ambassador at Washington and German consulates throughout the country.

German Guns Shell Almeria 'Without Warning'

Copyright by the Associated Press.

While nonintervention powers held conferences at London following the bombing of one of Germany's "pocket" battleships, five Nazi warships trained their guns on the town of Almeria, shelling the loyalist port. It was reported 100 were killed and 65 wounded. Shore batteries replied and are believed to have hit one of the German ships. Complete page of pictures—Page 12.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, May 31.—The Memorial Day calm along the Chicago to Buffalo steel strike front after Sunday night's bloody battle in South Chicago gave way tonight to fresh skirmishing and gun fire as civil authorities pressed for peace.

Pickets and loyal mill workers clashed at the gates of Republic's steel plant in Warren, Ohio. Three pickets were treated for head wounds by physicians.

Republic Steel's chartered airplanes, carrying food to beleaguered workers in the Warren plant, escaped an exchange of gun fire from within and without the plant.

Both in Warren and in Chicago, civil authorities conferred with strikers and steel executives, counseling peace.

Eyewitnesses said about 300 Republic workers rushed out of the Warren plant early tonight and drove off 40 men manning the picket lines after a short but furious skirmish with clubs and iron bars. Two pickets who identified themselves as Ray Powell and C. Bowman were treated by physicians for head injuries. The third injured man was not identified.

Sheriff Roy Hardman went into conference with mill officials in an effort to seek an agreement for maintaining peace.

Heroes Honored.

Chicago, May 31—Unionists and sympathizers paid tribute today to "our fallen heroes" as Gov. Horner sought to extend the truce which followed yesterday's carnage on the prairies near the Republic Steel Corporation's South Chicago plant.

Fatalities rose to 5, and more deaths were expected among the 105 injured, including 25 policemen, who were in hospitals.

The Governor summoned representatives of Republic and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and city and Federal officials for a resumption of last night's peace par-

Worst War Scare Since 1914 Rocks Crisis-Ridden Continent

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, May 31.—The greatest war scare in 23 years tonight filled the capitals of Europe with alarm as a new crisis was born in the shambles of Almeria, Spain, where five German warships opened a surprise bombardment in reprisal for the loyalist attack on the cruiser Deutschland.

In London, great crowds gathered in the streets to discuss the events, declared to be more grave than at any time since the frightening days of 1914. In Berlin, Paris, Rome and many other cities crowds gathered before newspaper offices and around radio sets, where the news was broadcast in a dozen languages.

World markets broke sharply as the Nazi-Spanish crisis developed. Gold stocks on the London exchange led a decline that swept through the entire market. Selling was extremely heavy on the Berlin bourse, with prices sagging two to three points. Traders rushed to unload as the specter of a new international crisis cast its shadow over a continent in arms. German bonds also ebbed to lower levels.

In Paris prices also fell as the significance of the attack on the defenseless Spanish city struck home to traders.

There was quick fright on the part of the general public when the news of the attack by the German fleet became known. Then as both Germany and Italy "disowned" the neutrality plan, brought into being to prevent the spread of Spain's civil war, this gave way to a feeling of fear and despair in many quarters.

Amid the wild rumors being circulated and as quickly denied there is foreboding as to the course Premier Mussolini will take after it was announced flatly Italy will support Germany. The withdrawal of Italy from the nonintervention accord of 27 powers may be the first step in Il Duce's determination to obtain "satisfaction" for loyalist attacks on Italian ships and for the disastrous defeat of Italian troops in the fighting in Spain, it is felt.

Also, there is tremendous speculation regarding the course Moscow will take. Should Russia also renounce the neutrality pact and openly decide to send men and arms to the support of the loyalists, it is felt the beginning of actual hostilities might be but a matter of days or hours in spite of the lack of formal declaration of war.

Meanwhile, there is intense bitterness here over the attack on the sleeping city. Reports from Paris indicate French diplomats are especially bitter because the Nazi bombardment was carried out before any warning was given to the neutrality committee.

Hayashi Quits; Mikado Seeks New Premier

Emperor Calls In Last of 'Elder Statesmen' for Advice in Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 31.—Emperor Hirohito tonight sent an imperial envoy to consult the aged Prince Kimmochi Saionji, last of Japan's "elder statesmen," on selection of a new premier to succeed Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, whose cabinet resigned suddenly in a body today.

Resignation of the army-supported cabinet after only four months in office—the second shortest term in modern Japanese history—eased the tension which resulted when Hayashi threatened to govern without a parliament if necessary after opposition parties won all but 11 of the 466 Diet seats in the April 30 election.

Victory for People.

The cabinet's withdrawal under terrific pounding by the opposition was regarded by majority parties as a victory for constitutional government and vindication of the people's verdict.

Those discussed as possible successors included Gen. Jiro Minami, governor general of Korea; Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, president of the privy council, and Prince Fumimaro Kenoye, president of the House of Peers.

It was generally believed the semi-military Hayashi government will be succeeded by a national coalition cabinet committed to a large army and navy, drastic administrative reforms, and a strong foreign policy.

Hayashi will carry on in office until the emporer designates a successor.

Unless the new cabinet includes some members of the now powerful political parties, it is believed its life may be as short as that of the Hayashi government. It was pointed out that with nearly 400 of the 466 seats in the lower house, the Minseito and Seiyukai parties can defeat government legislation, force out a cabnet, and block military control of government.

Farmer Kills Wife And Eight Children

Milwaukee, Wisc., May 31 (AP).—Scott Lowry, Waukesha County district attorney, announced today that John Waszak, 54, farmer, had confessed slaying his wife and eight children by exploding 40 pounds of dynamite April 18.

Coroner's report had said the blast was accidental, but the case was reopened after Phyllis Waszak, 21, one of the two survivors, was arrested on another charge last Thursday.

Sheriff Edward Mitten, of Milwaukee County, quoted her as saying her father threatened, "I will wipe out you and the whole damn family," following a quarrel with his wife and several members of the family.

The Spanish Crisis.

Germany rushes more warships into Spanish waters with orders to fire on loyalist planes and ships that threatened Nazi vessels.

Five German cruisers yesterday badly damaged Almeria, Spain, in "retaliation" for the bombing of the cruiser Deutschland, killing nearly 100 persons.

Paris, alarmed by the mounting fears of war, rushed efforts to create a new "safety zone" neutrality plan to save the Spanish accord, with hopes of averting the crisis expressed.

Italy, following the example of Germany, withdrew from the European nonintervention committee.

In Moscow it was announced that Russia will side with France in any developments in the crisis.

The threat of war yesterday brought Secretary of State Hull back from a Virginia week-end and caused excitement in Washington diplomatic and official circles. At Hyde Park, N. Y., President Roosevelt was following developments with evident anxiety.

Throughout Europe excited crowds stormed newspaper offices for the latest news. Stock market prices tumbled with news of the German bombardment.

Loyalists Bomb Palma.

By the United Press.

Rome, May 31. — Twenty persons were killed and three were injured when a Spanish Loyalist plane bombed Palma de Majorca in the Balearic Islands, the government announced tonight. Palma is held by the rebels.

The loyalist plane, a Potez 54, was said to have been brought down in flames by insurgent pursuit ships.

All except two of the "Anarchist crew" died in the crash, the dispatch said.

"Foreign" Subs Kill 200.

Valencia, Tuesday, June 1 (U.P.).—The loyalist government today announced "foreign submarines" had sunk two Spanish loyalist merchant vessels and attacked a third, with a reported loss of almost 200 lives.

The Febus News Agency said that 187 persons out of 312 aboard the Ciudad de Barcelona were killed or drowned when the steamer was sent to the bottom by a torpedo from an unidentified submarine near Barcelona Sunday.

Capt. Francisco Radel was reported among the killed. Only 125 persons were saved, Febus said. A loyalist seaplane attempted to bomb the submarine, while a second plane landed nearby to save some of those aboard the steamer. She sank immediately, however.

The government said the loyalist freighter Granada was torpedoed between 8 and 9 p. m. Monday about 60 miles south of Barcelona and that one crew member was killed and two were injured. The Granada sank in three minutes off Salou, "inside Spanish territorial waters," the government asserted.

A submarine also attacked a Spanish merchant ship off Lloret-mar on the Catalan coast. Two torpedoes were fired but both missed. One torpedo was found on the beach later and was said to have been Italian.

The government blamed the attacks on foreign submarines, claiming the rebels have none of their own.

Cuban Senate Accepts President's Resignation

Havana, Cuba, May 31 (U.P.).—The Senate today voted unanimously to accept the resignation of its president, Arturo Illas, after he had reiterated his "irrevocable decision" to quit because of "ill health." He was granted two months leave of absence. Wilfredo Albanes, National Democrat, was named temporary president pending election of Illas' successor.

More Ships Sent.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 31.—More German warships tonight were ordered rushed into Spanish waters with orders to fire upon any Loyalist plane or ship threatening German vessels.

This order followed the terrific bombarding of Almeria, Spain, in reprisal for the bombing of the German "pocket battleship" Deutschland, in which 24 sailors were killed. With his customary swiftness of action Reichsfeuhrer Hitler withdrew from the European nonintervention committee, along with Italy.

"The Reich's government will not participate in the control system (the patrol of Spanish coastland to prevent influx of arms and men) nor sessions of the nonintervention committee as long as no guafantee is given that such happenings will not recur," a communique said.

Force to Be Used.

"The Reich's government, of course, will decide according to its own ideas on measures to be taken toward the Red rulers in answer to the unexplained and treacherous assaults. (Germany and Italy recognize Insurgent Generalissimo Franco as ruler of Spain.)

"It has in addition ordered its warships for the duration of this condition to ward off by force every approaching Red Spanish plane or man of war."

A foreign office spokesman emphasized, however, that naval commanders were instructed to shoot only if there is danger of attack.

Likewise, Germany does not consider herself in a state of war with Valencia. (Spanish government officials charged Germany was waging open war against the republic.)

Co-operation Expected.

Neutral foreign observers, however, made no effort to conceal their concern lest the Deutschland incident and the Almeria sequel have further consequences. (Some London sources feared the Valencia government might even declare formal war against Germany.)

But, these observers added, there was hope European powers might be more willing than before to co-

Showdown Due In House Today On Earmarking

Rebellious Blocs Expected to Recall Amendments If Given Pledges.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's House leadership last night announced plans to fight relief bill earmarkings to a showdown today, hopeful the entire $505,000,000 set aside last week may be rewon for WPA.

A roll call of House members also will be demanded on the relief bill amendment slashing $2,000 from the pay of Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

Here again the leadership hopes to reverse last week's rebellious relief changes, and restore to Hopkins his $12,000 annual pay.

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, who single-handed had been negotiating terms between the President and the three House earmarking factions, forecast passage of the $1,500,000,000 bill today.

Rayburn yesterday conferred with Representative Wilburn Cartwright, of Oklahoma, more highways advocate, and Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, who has been leading the fight for flood-control earmarking.

Starnes earlier indicated satisfaction with the flood-control promises held out by the President. But yesterday he said his group does not want to see Federal funds "devoted to the building up of State and city political machines."

Disclaiming "pork" charges aimed at the blocs, Starnes said "we are fighting for resumption of Congressional control over Federal funds." He did not amplify his remark on political use of Federal money.

Hinges on Roads Unit.

With two of the House earmarking blocs receptive to White House pledges of PWA and flood control aid, withdrawal of the three earmarking amendments without a roll call battle hinged largely on action this morning of the House Public Roads Committee.

Chairman Cartwright, dissatisfied with the President's road promises, will go to his committee for instructions. The committee, once unanimous for roads fund earmarking, now is said to be closely divided.

It was possible the committee might reverse its position on highway earmarking. Only should this develop, it is believed, might the Administration later win a sweeping victory in the House without a stormy fight. But even with a hostile roads committee, the leadership claims the votes to eliminate the $150,000,000 earmarked for highways.

Support for the $150,000,000 roads amendment was said to have weakened following Administration word that the $75,000,000 set aside for farm-to-market roads could not be spent for that purpose under the amendment, but might be if WPA is left to its own devices.

The Bureau of Public Roads clears no projects costing under $7,500 a mile, and farm-to-market roads fall in that class, said Majority Leader Rayburn. The President wants WPA relief labor to perform the farm-to-market construction, with local boards selecting the projects, rather than State or Federal agencies.

No Authority to Agree.

Following a conference with Rayburn, the Oklahoma roads champion said he has not changed his views on the $150,000,000 earmarking. He said it was adopted by a 3-to-1 vote of the House and "even if I wanted to, I have no authority to agree for either the committee or the House to withdraw the amendment."

Administration promises on PWA, flood control and roads brought back from the White House by Rayburn were conditioned on withdrawal of the earmarking amendments. Neither Representative Alfred F. Beiter, of New York, head of the PWA faction, or Starnes, flood control earmarking spokesman, have made any commitments. On Saturday, both Beiter and Starnes indicated they were satisfied, and would withdraw their amendments if Cartwright withdrew his.

Beiter had won a $300,000,000 PWA earmarking in the relief bill. In return for its withdrawal, the President promised to cancel his executive order holding up PWA expenditures, sanction funds to complete projects in communities that have held bond elections and provide money for replacement of "hazardous" schoolhouses, where the communities themselves are unable to do so.

Starnes' flood-control earmarking amounted to $45,000,000 and was in addition to, about $52,500,000 in pending flood-control appropriations. In return for withdrawal of this amendment, the President promised to put all relief labor available in flood-control districts to work on flood projects. No specific amounts were mentioned by the President, but Starnes was given to understand that more might be spent than his amendment provided.

Much depended on the action of the House Public Roads Committee, called by Cartwright to meet this morning, as the three blocs managed last week's success by working in unison.

"So far as I know," said Cartwright in his statement last night," there is no effort or desire on the part of those sponsoring this amendment ($150,000,000 for highways) to attack or 'revolt' against anybody.

"Most of us are Democrats who have generally supported the program and policies of the President and expect to continue to do so. I feel that Congress has a part of the responsibility and that we should have the courage to support our own convictions when we think we are right."

Politics and People

C. I. O. Skirts Danger of Losing Good-Will of Public by Countenancing Violence and Illegal Tactics in Strikes by Its Membership.

By Franklyn Waltman

JOHN L. LEWIS and the leaders of his C. I. O. organizing committees have commenced skating on very thin ice. Unless these men put a stop to illegal actions and violence by their followers they rapidly will lose that public good-will which has permitted their movement to attain successful proportions.

WALTMAN.

Such incidents as that which occurred in Chicago Sunday will not help the cause of organized labor. Experience dictates caution in placing responsibility for such unfortunate affairs. The facts as to who committed the first overt act usually is in dispute. But all accounts of the Chicago rioting indicates that the strikers came armed with "clubs, gear shift bars, razors and other instruments"—and apparently firearms. Unless men are looking for trouble or have determined to resist police interference, they do not carry such weapons.

Nor are the steel strikers in Youngstown, Ohio, acting in a legal manner. This business of laying siege to plants and factories and preventing ingress and egress to such places, even interfering with the movement of mail trucks, clearly constitutes unlawful actions which should not be tolerated.

If such actions on the part of labor ever were justified, they certainly are not today. Labor no longer fights with its back to the wall. It has the Federal Government—and in many places State authorities—on its side. The rights of labor to organize and demand collective bargaining for the satisfaction of its grievances have been defined and are enforceable by court action It is no longer necessary for labor to resort to activities of the jungle to get a fair deal.

Not only has the Wagner labor relations act been made the law of the land, with Supreme Court blessings, but legislation is now pending on Capitol Hill to outlaw espionage activities by employers. Labor has been given the right to engage in peaceful picketing and a sympathetic Federal Government stands by to throw the force of its influence on the side of organized workers.

The full extent to which the Supreme Court has gone in upholding the rights of labor are not generally realized. This is well illustrated by a five-to-four opinion handed down by the Court in the case of Paul Senn vs. Tile Layers Protective Union, Local No. 5, yesterday a week ago. On any normal day this decision would have been a sensation. But it was overshadowed by the Court's rulings upholding the social security taxes.

In this decision, written by Justice Louis D. Brandeis, the Court upheld the validity of legislation authorizing workers to engage in peaceful picketing and patrolling and to give full publicity to labor disputes—even when such action has the effect of denying, as it did in this case, the right of man to pursue his livelihood. The facts in this case are undisputed and they must be understood to realize the full sweep of the Supreme Court ruling.

Paul Senn is engaged in Milwaukee in the tile contracting business on a very modest scale—so modest that it was conducted from his home and his annual income averaged about $1,500. He employed one or two journeymen tile layers and one or two helpers, depending upon the amount of work he had contracted to do at the time. On such jobs, he personally did a part of the work. But due to the fact that he had not served an apprenticeship of three years, as required by union rules, he was not eligible to become a member of the tile layers' union.

The tile workers union in 1935 undertook to induce Senn to become a union contractor. He expressed a willingness to sign such a contract with the union, but objected to one provision. This provision prohibited any person engaged in the tile contracting business from working with the tools or acting as a helper on any job. It required that all workers on a job should be union members.

Senn told the union representatives that he was willing to employ its members and to comply with its rules as to wages, hours and working conditions, but that he could not continue in business unless he were allowed to perform a part of the tile-laying work on jobs he had contracted. He offered to agree that as soon as his business was sufficient to permit he would refrain from manual labor.

The union, however, refused to eliminate the condition to which Senn objected and he declined to sign a contract with the union. Whereupon the union undertook to picket Senn's place of business. The union also sent letters to local architects and builders requesting them not to patronize Senn and threatening to picket them if they did so. The union also caused Senn's automobile to be followed from his place of business to jobs where he and his men were working, with a view to picketing such jobs.

Senn sought an injunction to restrain the union from ruining his business and livelihood by such means. During the trial the unions agreed to discontinue the following of Senn's automobile to his jobs and also to discontinue the sending of letters threatening to picket architects or builders who gave Senn work to do. This left the issue narrowed down as to whether the unions peacefully could picket Senn's place of business and proclaim by means of banners that "P. Senn Tile Co. is unfair to the Tile Layers Protective Union." The trial court held that this was lawful under the Wisconsin labor code, and dismissed the plea for an injunction.

The Supreme Court approved this finding, contending it was not in conflict with the guarantees of the fourteenth amendment. Justice Brandeis held that "clearly the means which the statute authorizes—picketing and publicity—are not prohibited by the fourteenth amendment."

"Members of a union might, without special statutory authorization by a State," he asserted, "make known the facts of a labor dispute, for freedom of speech is guaranteed by the Federal Constitution. The State may, in the exercise of its police power, regulate the methods and means of publicity, as well as the use of the public streets.

"If the end sought by the unions is not forbidden by the Federal Constitution the State may authorize working men to seek to attain it by combining as pickets, just as it permits capitalists and employers to combine in other ways to attain their desired economic ends."

The opinion further ruled that "the end sought by the unions is not unconstitutional" and that the requirement which Senn had been asked to accept but refused had been found by the State courts "to be not arbitrary or capricious, but a reasonable rule, adopted to protect the tile workers."

"There is no basis," asserted the Court majority, "for a suggestion that the union's request that Senn refrain from working with his own hands, or their employment of picketing and publicity, was malicious; or that there was a desire to injure Senn. The sole purpose of the picketing was to acquaint the public with facts and, by gaining its support, to induce Senn to unionize his shop. There was no effort to induce Senn to do an unlawful thing. There was no violence, no force was applied, no molestation or interference, no coercion. There was only the pursuasion incident to publicity."

The conservative quartet on the court, for whom Justice Pierce Butler spoke, sharply assailed this reasoning. They pointed out that previous decisions of the court had established the rule that the provisions of the fourteenth amendment "forbid State action which would take from the individual the right to engage in common occupations of life, and that they assure equality of opportunity to all under like circumstances." The objective of the unions, asserted the minority, was to force Senn to quit work as helper or tile layer and therefore the object was an unlawful one.

"By picketing, the unions would prevent him from working on jobs he obtained from others and so destroy that business," the minority contended. "Then, by enforcement of their rules they would prevent him from working as a journeyman for employers approved by the union or upon any job employing union men. Adhering to the thought that there is not enough work to go around, unquestionably the union purpose is to eliminate him from all tile-laying work."

The minority concluded with the observation that the judgment affirmed by the majority "violates a principle of fundamental law: that no man may be compelled to hold his life or the means of living at the mere will of others."

It is the majority opinion, however, which becomes the law of the land and when the courts are ready to go as far as they have in this case to uphold the rights of labor, there is no excuse for labor to resort to violence to attain its ends.

Flowers Worth $1,000 to Deck Duke's Nuptials

Monts, France, May 31.—The picturesque Chateau de Cande received today a $1,300 conscignment of flowers which will for ma background for the wedding Thursday of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

Mrs. Warfield, assisted by a London decorator, planned the flower motif for the chateau music room where the wedding will take place. The decorator, who often arranged the flowers at Fort Belvedere, the Duke's retreat when he was King, arrived today and will remain at Tours until after the wedding.

At the same time, a smiling truck driver drove up to one of the chateau gates announcing he had a cargo of flowers from Paris. Mrs. Charles E. Bedaux, wife of the chateau's owner, was understood to have selected the $1,300 consignment.

The long-awaited wedding ring, fashioned of Welsh gold by a Rue de la Paix jeweler, arrived during the day, precedin gthe first wedding guests by 24 hours.

While masters of the chateau were preparing for the wedding, cooks, gardeners and other chateau employes went ahead with plans for their own celebratoin of the ceremony.

The first step was 32 haircuts. Next, the servants decorated their quarters for a wedding ball. They plan a dance in the garden pavilion Wednesday evening and hope Mrs. Warfield will "look in for a glass of wine."

The head gardener himself says he expects to present the bride a bouquet from the chateau rose gardens and deliver a little speech in behalf of employes.

Mayor Charles Mercier, who will perform the ceremony, finished work on a speech he will deliver to Edward and his bride. He disclosed that plans for a double-ring wedding have been canceled and the single-ring ritual will be used.

By the Associated Press.

Poli, who withdrew from active participation in business in 1928, at one time operated one of the largest chains of theaters in the East, mostly in New England.

During the latter part of the Taft Administration, Poli added a Washington link to his theatrical chain, taking over P. B. Chase's Vaudeville Theater, formerly the old Albaugh's Opera House, located on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue at Fifteenth street northwest.

Hither Poli brought a stock company that was highly successful. The stars were Izetta Jewell and A. H. Van Buren, and among others who played with the company was Hardie Meakin, now manager of RKO-Keith's, who left Poli in 1917 to go to war.

Born in Luca, Italy.

Sylvester Poli was born in Luca, Italy, Dec. 31, 1859. As a youth he went to Paris, there apprenticing himself to a famous sculptor, a friend of Napoleno III. He worked for several years in the Museum Cravan, and then, well-versed in the art of clay and wax modeling, he came to the United States in 1881. His first job was in the Eden Musee in New York City.

His second job was in the Egyptian Museum in Philadelphia, and from there he went to Chicago, where he was given permission to model in wax the likenesses of seven persons condemned to death as a result of the Haymarket riots.

Poli exhibited these figures in Chicago and later took them on the road, doing a business that gave him the foundation of a fortune. About this time he married Miss Rose Leverone, whom he taught the art of sewing beards and hair on wax figures.

As business prospered, Poli, with a partner named Robinson, opened combination theaters and museums in Toronto Ontario, and later summer show places at Harlotte Beach, near Rochester, N. Y.

Two years later Poli branched out for himself, going to Troy, N. Y., where he remodeled an abandoned church and conducted a theater and museum for a year. When fire swept this away Poli went to New Haven, Conn., where he opened a combination museum and "chamber of horrors." This was a tremendous success. The crowds were so great that Poli decided to expand, and he chose as his partners a Col. Healy and a man named Bigelow, Kickapoo Indian medicine makers. They bought a building known as Music Hall.

Using New Haven as a base, Poli continually expanded his activities, acquiring theaters in Waterbury, Bridgeport and Hartford, Conn.; Springfield, Mass.; Worcester, Mass.; Scranton, Pa.; Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Baltimore and Washington. The theater here was torn down to make way for the Government building prgram.

Poli started in New Haven with ten employes. Ultimately the circuit embraced 3,000 and the pay roll grew to $300,000 weekly.

Taken Over By Fox.

The entire Poli chain changed hands January 1, 1928, the year Poli retired, being taken over by the Fox Theater CorRporation at a reported pression, however, upset the deal, and Poli, as chief bondholder, took back his theaters through a Federal court sale.

Poli, like Barnum, believed in self-advertisement. Tall, handsome, of distinguished carriage, he liked to have people look at him. In Palm Beach and elsewhere, he made it a point when eating to sit at the head of a conspicuous table, so that, as he told friends, people might ask:

"Who is that tall, distinguished man with the pince-nez?"

Poli is survived by his wife and four daughters, Mrs. Adelina Poli Leonard, Mrs. Juliette Shehan, Mrs. Laurina Poli Nolan and Marchesa Lillian Gerini, the latter a personal friend of Benito Mussolini.

Regatta Honor Won by Danker In Sink Quick

Wins Commodore's Cup, Handicap Race at Gunston Cove.

Top honors in the Potomac River Sailing Association's three-day Decoration Day regatta at Gunston Cove went to George Dankers, who sailed his 18-foot sloop, Sink Quick, to victory in four races, made a clean sweep of the handicap class, won the Commodore's Cup in Saturday's distance event, and carried off the lion's share of the association's silverware.

Judge Prentice Edrington brought Lady Avon over the finish line in No. 1 position three times to bag the cup in the 20 open class. Verner Smythe's Sassy Too sailed true to form and won the three Comet races, with R. E. Couvert's Escapade taking second place in the three-race series.

Clyde Cruit, who sailed So Big to second place in the Sunday morning race, dropped to third by a 1-second margin in the afternoon and lost out to Escapade by 1 minute 40 seconds in yesterday's race.

Zephyr Second.

Jack Marsh's Zephyr was second to the series winner, Sink Quick, in the handicap class, finishing in second place, with Black Cat, a newcomer to the fleet, sailed by R. W. Barnhardt, third.

The boats were handicapped by the light airs which were streaky and shifted all around the cove. Several boats of the handicap class found too little wind to finish under sail in the race Sunday morning.

In the afternoon the light southerly breeze found Sassy Too sailing up among the 20 footers, and at one time out in front, but as the breeze faded under the south shore of the cove Lady Avon, Myray and Cricket II passed her only to have her sneak into second place on elapsed time by jockeying through an anchored fleet on the last leg of the homeward reach.

Three comets, Couvert's Escapade, Cruit's So Big and White's Frolic followed Sassy Too, crossing less than a minute apart with Escapade shading So Big by one second.

Seventeen boats of all classes took part in the three race series.

Comet Class.

20 Foot Open Class.

Handicap Class.

Reports to the State health department of cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever (Eastern type) emphasize the need for preventive measures against this disease, according to announcement by Dr. Earle G. Brown, Arlington County health officer.

Dr. Brown points out three measures of value in preventing the dread disease:

First, avoid the tick; second, remove ticks from the persons as soon as possible, and third, be vaccinated.

Great care, he says, should be taken in the selecting of camp sites, as ticks will crawl into a bed laid on the ground. The safest camping ground is in standing timber where low vegetation is scanty.

Court Change Need Removed, Says Sen. Pope

Supporter of Roosevelt Plan Stresses Recent Liberal Decisions.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, a supporter of the Roosevelt court bill, expressed the belief yesterday recent Supreme Court decisions had removed the "impelling necessity" for the measure.

"The main reason for the bill was to have a court that would not obstruct a constructive program for dealing with the Nation's problems," he said.

Pointing to the court decisions on social security and the Wagner labor act, he added:

"I have a feeling that since a majority of the court has adopted a constitutional view that is sensible and liberal, the proposals of the President are less necessary."

Pope said he still believed the bill was "all right" and that probably the line-up in the Senate was unchanged by the recent decisions. In fact, he contended that those parts of the bill dealing with congestion in the courts were still as desirable as ever.

Pope's statement, first of its kind by an Administration supporter, added to the prevailing uncertainty as to the future of the controversial measure. He is one of 33 Senators publicly committed to the bill.

Opposition Senators said they hoped to be able to file the committee's unfavorable report on the measure in the Senate this week, but there was no word from Administration leaders as to subsequent procedure.

Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, of the Senate Judiciary Committee said he assumed the Senate would take up the measure and settle the issue once for all, but he did not claim to speak with authority.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, has refused to comment on the situation ever since the Supreme Court upheld the social security act a week ago yesterday.

Some opposition Senators have said the group of new legislative recommendatoins from the White House in the past few days indicated a desire to turn the spotlight away from the court bill with a view to letting it die, but no confirmation has come from Administration spokesmen.

War Risk Insurance Deadline Falls Tonight

By the Associated Press.

Veterans' Administration officials warned 2,200 World War veterans whose war risk term insurance policies expired yesterday that they would have only until midnight tonight to apply for new permanent policies.

President Roosevelt vetoed last week a bill to permit extension of the term insurance policies for another five years.

Religious Group Sets 'Church Days'

New York, May 31 (AP).—The National Committee for Religion and Welfare Recovery issued a statement tonight urging "all religious persons" in the country to observe "Loyalty Days" October 2 and 3 by attending church.

Asserting statistics showed a decline of 30 per cent in contributions to religious work since 1932 despite a 51 per cent increase in income, the committee said:

"With grave apprehension we appraise the day in which we live. A wave of secularism, materialism and consequent politico-social theories is sweeping the world, producing hostile, antispiritual and aesthetic attitudes toward religion. * * *"

U. A. W. Parley On Ford Drive Set Here Today

Chiefs to Plan Organization of 140,000; Lewis Aid Pledged.

Washington will be the scene today of conferences on next steps in the United Automobile Workers' drive to organize the 140,000 employes of Henry Ford.

Homer Martin, union president, announced in Detroit he would fly here early this morning to confer with John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, on the tense situation arising from last Wednesday's violence outside the Ford River Rouge plant. The auto union is an affiliate of the C. I. O. and has received the latter organization's backing in all of its organization moves to date, including the General Motors strike.

Lewis Support Pledged.

Meanwhile, the union's weekly newspaper published a telegram from Lewis pledging support to the campaign to unionize Ford plants. The message said:

"Attack by agents of Ford company on Representative Frankensteen and other agents of the United Automobile Workers of America is a most flagrant outrage which will be resented by every member of organized labor and every thoughtful citizen.

"Such demonstrations indicate the paramount necessity of comprehensive organization of the workers in the Ford plants and other units of major industries.

"It will serve to intensify the desire of the workers to enroll in organizations associated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

"Committee for Industrial Organization will give every assistance to the United Automobile Workers and its members to carry on and to establish collective bargaining in the plants of the Ford company."

Organizers Beaten.

Union organizers were beaten and driven off on Wednesday as they approached the River Rouge plant to distribute union handbills. Richard T. Frankenstein and Walter P. Reuther were leaders of the union organizers and were themselves beaten.

After his conference here, Martin will hurry back to Detroit for another meeting tomorrow of the union's Ford organizing committee, at which a date will be set for another attempt to distribute the handbills, which urge "Unionism, Not Fordism."

A gigantic mass meeting of U. A. W. workers is to be planned, Martin said, for the purpose of protesting the beating of organizers.

W.C.T.U. Head Arrives in D. C. For Convention

Education to Displace Carrie Nation Drives, Says Mrs. Boole.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, international president of the W. C. T. U., a pleasant and positive woman dressed in black crepe, arrived in Washington yesterday for the international convention to be held here starting Thursday.

Mrs. Boole, born in Van Wert, Ohio, the State which cradled the prohibition movement, stated that the organization has a new approach to its problem of removing alcohol beverage glasses around the globe, which is education.

"There are no more Carrie Nations," she said, "and our political activity is not as active as it once was. Our plan now is to teach the world the evils of alcohol through information in schools, churches and clubs."

Mrs. Boole related how Hitler, though the German government is in the liquor business, had approved "alcohol-free" restaurants. "The W. C. T. U. has set up several restaurants in Germany where the family can gather in the old German custom and drink coffee or tea, without liquor or beer being in sight."

At the Olympic Games, she said, Hitler gave the W. C. T. U. control of the women's quarters, "not necessarily to keep the girls sober, but to conduct in an orderly way which he knew we could do, places where people could drink fruit juices—we served 12 different kinds—and eat dainty salads, etc." Hitler is a total abstainer.

W. C. T. U. women are interesting themselves in world peace, she said, and will memorialize their group in Geneva in the interest of disarmament. Mrs. Boole brought with her a wreath made of leaves from trees of 20 different countries, which will be laid on the Frances B. Willard bust in Statuary Hall Thursday. Mrs. Boole is at Hotel Washington.

Senate to Receive Pupils' Greetings

Greetings of 20,000 school children of Knoxville and the Great Smoky Mountains region to the Senate of the United States will be delivered in Washington tomorrow morning by two beautiful Cherokee Indian girls great-granddaughters of Tsali, famous hero of the Great Smokies.

The visitors will bring invitations to Senators Bailey and Reynolds of North Carolina and McKellar and Berry of Tennessee to attend a pageant—"The Spirit of the Great Smokies" to be staged at Cherokee in the shadow of Mount Le Comte early in July.

This pageant, an historical one, will depict the famous struggle of the Cherokees of a hundred years ago for existence—the trek westward and the battles between those who decided to stay and the United States Army. It was Tsali who offered himself and his three sons as hostages to be shot so that the small band of about one hundred might be allowed to stay. Because of his youth, the youngest son was spared and the two visiting Cherokee girls, Irma and Lucille Washington are the granddaughters of this third son.

Trans-Sea Flights To Start June 24

St. Johns, Newfoundland, May 31 (Canadian Press).—Officials of Imperial Airways announced today the air line and Pan-American Airways would begin transatlantic flights via Newfoundland June 24.

The announcement did not specify in what direction the flights would be, but it was believed here a British plane would fly from England and a Pan-American plane from New York, both taking off at about the same time.

The flights, without mail or passengers, would be strictly experimental; similar to tests made last week over a proposed route between the United States and Bermuda.

British Flier Crashes On Record Attempt

Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, May 31 (AP).—David Llewellyn, British flying officer attempting a record Cape-to-Croydon flight, crashed today at Serowe, Bechuanaland. The plane was badly damaged and he was wedged in his seat. His outward attempt ended in a forced landing near his goal.

Father Free in Whipping.

Vienna, May 31 (U.P.).—A father may beat his 22-year-old daughter if she misbehaves, a court ruled today. Charles Schmidt, 48, arrested for thrashing his pretty blonde daughter, Mitzi, because she stayed out two nights, was freed.

Electricity Cost Lowest on Record

New York, May 31.—The present year started with the cost of electricity to consumers at the lowest level on record, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The average price during the first two months was 2.32 cents per kilowatt-hour, as compared with 2.45 cents a year ago, a decrease of 5.3 per cent. This decrease in price, however, was more than offset by the increase in the volume sold. Revenues from consumers during the first two months amounted to $378,140,000 this year as against $350,361,000 last year, an increase of 7.9 per cent.

The maintenance of this increase during the remainder of the year would result in annual revenues reaching a new high record of $2,221,000,000 in 1937. This would compare with the previous high record of $2,058,000,000 in 1936 and with the depression's lot of $1,754,000,000 in 1933.

Baby Shot in Head 'Dies' Three Times

Columbus, Ga., May 31 (U.P.).—A 5-year-old baby with a .32 caliber bullet in his brain "died" three times on an operating table today before surgeons gave up the fight to save his life.

Jerked back to life twice by powerful stimulants after his heart stopped beating, Bobbie McElvey finally died. The child, son of C. A. McElvey, dairyman near here, was shot accidentally by Beatrice Taylor, 13, a colored maid in the McElvey home.

Victim of Rare Disease Is Dead in California

Santa Ana, Calif., May 31 (AP).—William L. Morrison, 49, whose skin gradually turned black due to the rare disease melanosis, died here today.

An autopsy, permission for which he granted, was set for tonight, to be performed by a number of Southern California specialists. Doctors who had the man under treatment said the disease was a tumor on the liver, which caused surrounding parts and eventually the skin to turn black.

Premier Hayashi Resigns.

The resignation of Premier Senjuro Hayashi of Japan is a real victory for the democratic elements in that army-ridden land.

Despite his overwhelming defeat at the polls a month ago, the premier had let it be known that he would stay in office just the same and, if need be, dissolve the newly elected Diet and force another election. But, in the face of the almost completely united opposition of the leading political parties, of the business and industrial elements and, last but not least, of the Privy Council, Hayashi finally changed his mind.

His resignation does not necessarily mean that civilian control of the Japanese government is about to be established. That may be a long way off. The army's power and influence are still considerable. Constitutionally, the cards are stacked for them, so far as control of the government is concerned. Possibly, as Mr. Hedges suggested in his article on the page opposite yesterday, there may now follow only a shuffling of the cards in the cabinet, with the two dominant parties, the Seiyukai and the Minseito, given one or two posts in return for their support of the new government.

The significant thing, however, is not the speed of the change from militarist to civilian control of the government but the fact that such a change is taking place at all. Hayashi's departure is the shadow of coming events, despite the probability that the substance of power will, in the next months as in past years, remain in the hands of the militarists.

WPA "Career" Workers.

Col. Somervell, WPA administrator for New York, is making plans to dislodge some of the people who have not stirred since they got their first relief job under the CWA in 1933. He hints darkly that these "career" relief workers may not find it so comfortable on home relief with their monthly allowance cut in half. That is no doubt true; some of them may even be aroused from their lethargy and go forth in search of real jobs.

But the inertia of certain WPA workers and the deterioration which has made some of them unfit for regular employment are in consequence, not a cause, of the situation which troubles Col. Somervell.

Instead of berating frail humanity for following a natural impulse to play safe and avoid unnecessary exertion, the colonel ought to be demanding reforms in the relief policies which are responsible for such developments. If the pay and conditions of work in a relief job compare favorably with what the workers could obtain in private employment, it is a foregone conclusion that relief jobs will be regarded as prized possessions. Hard though it seems, the recipient of relief must be given a strong economic inducement to get out and fend for himself. That is admitted by Col. Somervell when he suggests that cutting the monthly allowance might have a galvanizing influence.

It further reflects upon the administration of the work relief system to learn that no scientific study of the qualifications and records of the WPA "career" workers has yet been made, not even with a view to dislodging those who have become incapacitated for return to private employment.

Vocational Training Study.

President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Education is preparing a study on vocational training which it regards as a most important aid to cutting down relief rolls by reducing the numbers of unskilled workers.

The depression has unquestionably demonstrated the necessity for better distribution of our working forces. At the same time it has destroyed many of the opportunities that once were open to young persons to acquire specialized training. Vocational training, therefore, provides something quite as essential to the well-being of the individual as the general expansion of employment. It also gives men and women better opportunities to engage in congenial occupations.

Our facilities for providing such training are at present severely limited. To improve and expand the inadequate systems now in existence without wasting money is a difficult task. The President's committee will have a wide field of investigation to cover, if it confines itself to this one subject of vocational guidance.

It is likely to dissipate energy, and it will certainly waste valuable time, if forced to expand its study to include the relationship of the Federal Government to local educational systems. This latter subject involves constitutional and political issues as well as purely educational matters, and ought to be left for later consideration.

Does Germany Want War?

Exactly what happened at Ibiza last Saturday remains a mystery. The Berlin government would have the world believe that the pocket battleship Deutschland, peacefully at anchor in the harbor of one of the Balearic Islands, was suddenly attacked by Spanish government planes, with the result that more than a score of German sailors were killed. The Valencia authorities, on the other hand, claim that the loyalist planes were acting in self-defense, that they had been fired upon by the German battleship which, anyway, had no business being in Ibiza, since the patrol of the waters surrounding the Balearics had been intrusted to the French fleet.

The truth of these conflicting charges remains to be determined. But there is no mystery as to the ghastly sequel of the Ibiza incident. Instead of submitting its case to the London non-intervention committee, or any other disinterested agency, instead of awaiting the verdict of an impartial investigation into the question of what actually happened, Germany retaliated by a wanton and utterly inexcusable bombardment of the Port of Almeria, killing, it is reported, 100 men, women and children and wounding at least 65 others. Simultaneously, the Nazi regime and Italy withdrew from the non-intervention committee.

It is not surprising that this latest turn in the prolonged Spanish crisis should have aroused alarm and consternation in world capitals. For one possibility is, in view of the Almeria bombardment, that Germany, aided by Italy, may use the pretext of the Ibiza incident to wage open war on the Spanish government.

Actually, it has been waging such a war, in everything but name, for many months. German fliers, operating under the banners of Gen. Franco, have helped to ruin more than one Spanish city and have been responsible for the death of many noncombatants, including women and children. Recently German planes destroyed Guernica, the holy city of the Basques, and foreign Fascist fliers only last week bombarded Valencia and Barcelona.

Under the circumstances the attitude of injured innocence displayed by the Nazi rulers is not without a grimly ludicrous aspect. It is a further revelation that the civilized world can expect no moral scruples or humanitarian considerations to influence the policy of the Fascist states.

This is not the first time that foreign ships, including men of war, have been under attack during the Spanish conflict. But the British and French governments, in the face of such developments, have manifested a cool-headedness which is in direct contrast to the recklessness of the Nazis. And the only circumstance likely to restrain the Hitler regime from going even further than it has in the Spanish crisis is the possibility that it may lead to a general war, for which the Third Reich is not yet prepared.

Pending the decision of the Berlin government, Europe is again on tenterhooks, and the painful efforts of Great Britain and France to isolate the Spanish civil war may be smashed to smithereens. Whether that happens will depend, in the first place, on the decision reached by Berlin and Rome as to what further steps they are now to take. But it will also depend, in large measure, on what the governments at London and Paris decide to do.

Hitherto they have shown an almost unlimited capacity to retreat in the face of Fascist browbeating. In the name of peace, they have repeatedly closed their eyes to flagrant violations of the non-intervention agreement. They have stood by helplessly while international law and humanitarian considerations have been ruthlessly set aside. Now the essential fragility of their past efforts stands clearly revealed. Once again, despite their well-meant but feeble efforts, Europe teeters on the brink of war.

In the meantime, a grave responsibility rests on the United States Government to consider whether the neutrality law, now applied only to the Spanish government and the insurgents, should not also be applied to Germany, Italy and any other government actively participating in this conflict. Despite the absence of a declaration of war at the time of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, we applied the then existing neutrality law to both of those combatants. The Spanish situation in its present dangerous setting should be subject to the same realistic attitude.

And Then What?

Its scientific name is prolactin, but its discoverers, scientists in the laboratories of the American Museum of Natural History, call it, with quaint contrariness, the "Clark Gable love fluid."

They declare, with some appearance of finality, though it is really still a matter of conjecture, that it will turn a man's love to ice. Because they have tried the stuff on mice and fish and found that it caused the rampant male to lose all interest in courtship, they have concluded that it will have the same effect on man and will leave the poor fish with hardly enough spirit to hum the beginning of an ancient ditty, "Am I a man or am I a mouse?"

This somehow suggests the query of the adoring youngster who saw his father triumphantly finish a crossword puzzle: "What are you going to do now, pop?"

Violence Is No Remedy.

Outbursts of violence are seldom spontaneous. On the contrary, they are usually symptoms of long-standing struggles by which the emotions of the participants have been deeply stirred. And in their immediate background investigators are almost certain to find evidence of arbitrary or provocative conduct.

In this respect the fatal riot at Chicago runs true to form. It follows by less than a week the arbitrary announcement of the Republic Steel Corporation that it does not intend to sign a contract with any affiliate of the C. I. O., because such action might be a step in the direction of the closed shop and the check-off. The relation between this attitude and the tragic battle between police and strikers on Sunday cannot be reasonably denied.

At a mass meeting just before the rioting began the attitude of the striking workmen was explained. They regard the company as a "law violator" because of its refusal to sign a contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. The company's disregard for the spirit, if not the letter, of the national labor relations act undoubtedly encouraged the attitude of lawlessness which resulted in a march on its Chicago plant.

More astute corporation managements have recognized the explosive character of situations similar to that which the Republic Steel's announcement created. Of course, they are not ready to surrender to the closed shop or the check-off system. Those issues can be met when they are fairly confronted. The great majority of employers realize, however, that bugaboos of this sort cannot be used to evade collective bargaining without arousing the passions of labor groups more conscious of their power than their responsibilities.

As the situation stands, therefore, arbitrary conduct has been met by open violence. To a large extent, the tragic clash in South Chicago is explained by the company's stubborn resistance to the normal procedure of collective bargaining. But violence is no cure for arbitrary conduct. Nor can it be excused by the company's unwillingness to sign a contract. This ill-advised resort to force has put the union in an even more indefensible position than that assumed by the company.

Reports from Chicago agree that the strikers marched on the mill with the object of forcing it to cease operations. It was the plain duty of the police to resist that attack. Indications are that they pleaded with the strikers to halt before the swinging of nightsticks and the shooting began. For the results of that encounter leaders of the S. W. O. C. have only themselves to blame.

Resort to assault was particularly ill-advised in view of the strong legal position which the union occupies. The national labor relations act requires employers to bargain collectively with their employes. Indeed, that act was designed to prevent outbreaks of violence in precisely such situations as that resulting from the current steel strikes. An appeal to the National Labor Relations Board would not be as swift and dramatic as a march on the company plant. But it would have saved the lives of five strikers and prevented the serious injury of many others.

Now that the melee is over the necessity of appealing from force to the law still remains. The strikers appear to have gained nothing, except a reputation for impulsive and irresponsible action, while their loss has been tragic. And, of course, the company has reaped a new wave of bitter resentment, which may be far more costly, from its own viewpoint, than the signing of a contract with representatives of its employes.

Violence is never a satisfactory technique. The encounter at Chicago should teach the C. I. O. that it cannot win by defying public authority, and the steel company that its nineteenth century attitude is entirely untenable.

Remember the good old days when we were afraid the Government would go broke messing around with Muscle Shoals?

Because New York Got It.

From the Charleston News and Courier.

"To compel each State to contribute at least 25 per cent of the amount sent into it for relief would eliminate the present shocking situation in which a number of States have failed to contribute even 10 per cent of the money spent within their borders." So the New York Times says, editorially, and probably is referring to South Carolina among other States.

The State of South Carolina is poor, very poor. It is used to poverty, and one suspects that the New York Times knows why. In South Carolina, in the depression, has been no threat of famine or hunger greater than the State has endured time and again before 1932.

There was no incentive for the State to tax its people for "relief." It took what was handed it from Washington. While the News and Courier does not defend the Federal handout policy to any State, it declares that South Carolina could not be expected to refuse a share of the alms.

States such as New York, with their thronged cities, reached the point that they could not or would not support themselves, so they contributed so much to get so much more from Washington. Therefore South Carolina claimed and got a share.

If New York and Pennsylvania had not crawled on their bellies to Washington, South Carolina would have gotten nothing, but South Carolina would have gotten along somehow. Nobody starves or freezes in South Carolina, depression or no depression.

War-Risk Insurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President is to be commended for using his veto to remove from the list of war-risk insurance beneficiaries, hundreds of chiselers who have been covered with insurance protection now for about 20 years, at the expense of other veterans who converted their insurance and paid Uncle Sam a fair price for being insured.

Where is the justice of allowing one veteran to carry an unconverted policy at a very much lower premium rate, while a similar converted policy not only pays substantially more in revenue to the Government but the moneys paid under it are made beneficial to the holder of the unconverted policy? This has been going on for 20 years, and at the expense of veterans who ask no charity of their Government, but pay their insurance bills to Uncle on the same basis as they pay similar bills to private companies.

Any Congressman who votes to over-ride the President's veto will be doing an injustice to the vast mass of self-sustaining veterans.

Why doesn't Congress do something constructive for veterans holding war-risk converted policies? Notwithstanding every other agency of the Government lends money right and left, to nearly everyone at rates as low as 1 per cent, the Veterans' Bureau continues to charge holders of war-risk policies 6 per cent for loans! Why?

Thousands of 20-year war-risk endowment policies are now maturing. The purpose of war-risk insurance was to provide protection to veterans in their old age. Why then isn't the insurance act modified so that those veterans who desire to leave their money with the Government can do so, receiving policies that, when exchanged, will give them monthly annuities at ages commencing at 50 and up? I have a $10,000 endowment policy maturing within a few years and would like to leave the money with the Government, with the stipulation that beginning age 60 it would guarantee me so much a month for the rest of my life. A usual commercial insurance transaction—but not possible with the Veterans' Bureau! Why?

What we need is a little research into veteran insurance matters, and some constructive legislation, instead of the kind President Roosevelt vetoed this week.

Jesus A Pessimist?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having just heard a sermon from a man I much revere (Rev. Dr. Russell J. Clinchy), stating that Jesus was a "pessimist" in his predictions concerning the destruction of Jerusalem and the woes that would follow thereafter, I ask space in The Post to state some facts which seem to be overlooked even by students of history.

It was an easy transition for the preacher named to pass from Titus to Hitler and to Mussolini and liken the present situation of the world to those dark days nearly 2,000 years ago. But Josephus, the Jewish historian of those times, was sent into the doomed city to warn the inhabitants, and to give them opportunity to come out and be unharmed. In warning them he also told them that they had brought the impending calamity upon themselves by their rebellion against God and man. Upon the refusal of the Jews to take advantage of the Roman offer, the infuriated soldiers of Titus could not be restrained in their ravaging work on the city. Just another case of what we see today in Spain.

The conflict now in Europe between religion (as organized in different bodies called "churches") is but another instance of the end of an "epoch" in the history of religion. Strange that our critics of Hitler and Mussolini do not say anything about Kemal in Turkey who is doing the same thing for the Moslem religion that the men in Russia, Germany and Italy are doing for the so-called Christian religion. It is a house-cleaning age. Where religion has failed because it has lost its original spirit and purpose, then overthrow is inevitable, if God is just. There is no more reason to wail as a pessimist over this sort of reformation of religion than to weep over the destruction of Jerusalem, which was the inevitable outcome of a Sadducean priesthood presiding over the Holy of Holies.

Titus did not know or care about God's will or judgments; neither did Napoleon in his destruction of the "divine right of kings;" nor does Mussolini or Hitler or Stalin or Kemal. But preachers should remember that the Bible speaks of a certain Babylonian king as "Nebuchadnezzar, my servant." Jesus was not a pessimist, neither is any man who belives in God and in the final triumph of righteousness.

Supreme Court Inscriptions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sessions of the Supreme Court are held in a beautiful new building, recently completed, with an inscription reading, "Equal Justice Under Law."

Where is unequal justice to be found? I believe that in the every day acts of millions of our American people, justice is prevalent and present, and that when appeals are made to a court of law, only approximate justice can be had due, primarily, to the conflicting history or testimony in the case.

Therefore, regardless of whether we change the personnel of the Supreme Court, we will do well to change the wording on the court building itself.

The Exclusion Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Readers of The Post have noted that Ken Sato, a prominent journalist of Japan, is fulfilling a mission which he states (Honolulu Advertiser, March 10) is to explain to "American editors, Congressmen and the President" Japan's desire that the law excluding aliens ineligible to citizenship be repealed if friendly relations between the two nations are to be maintained. A number of interesting details in connection therewith have developed.

On March 23, a week before Sato's initial appearance in Los Angeles, Japan's foreign minister, Naotake Sato, notified the Diet that Japan was about to open negotiations for repeal of the exclusion law, as he had information that American opinion was growing in favor of settlement and that Congress had the matter under consideration. That information was received apparently from Seijiro Yoshizawa, spokesman for the foreign office at Washington, who was called back to Tokyo to act there as counselor of the Japanese Embassy. In an interview in the Japanese American News of San Francisco, February 5, he referred to the "awakening of American sentiment to the injustice of the exclusion act," and cited a bill of Congressman Kvale, of Minnesota, "to grant the quota to Japan," as indication of Congressional consideration of the matter.

Mr. Sato has been courteously received in the various cities visited and has perhaps learned (1) that a request in 1933 to the President's Cabinet committee of three on revision of the nationality laws to recommend that Congress take up the subject of Japanese immigration was ignored; (2) that every member (35) of the entire Congressional delegations from California, Oregon and Washington in January, 1934, signed letters to President Roosevelt opposing any modification of the present exclusion provision; (3) that the subject was not thereafter mentioned on the floor or in committees of Congress during the sessions of 1934, 1935, 1936 and 1937; (4) that all the many national organizations which took decided stand against admission of Asiatic immigration have steadily maintained that position; and (5) finally, that the Kvale bill, H. R. 3006, cited by Mr. Yoshizawa, in no way refers to change of the immigration law in regard to the admission of Japanese or other aliens ineligible to American citizenship.

Too Much Education?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American youth is being overeducated to a regrettable degree. The number of students is said to be more than 20 times what it was 50 years ago, while propaganda is everywhere exerted steadily to accelerate college attendance.

Skilled artisans are no longer disposed to give their sons the training they themselves received, but fall in with the current idea that more respectable vocations, requiring higher education, must be provided for them. A four to six year college course is, therefore, demanded no matter what the sacrifice by parents or cost to the taxpayer, in order that a professional career or that of a business executive may be secured.

The argument runs something like this: Without high school, the annual income will be $1,000; with high school, $2,000; with a college education, $5,000. So it happens that instead of going to work at a trade or in business at the normal age of 16 or 18, which should be the rule, the youth is persuaded to continue his schooling in college for four to six years longer until, as a mature man, he has to commence real life at a disadvantage. His term of education is prolonged by lengthy vacations and attention to semi-professional athletic sports.

This obsession for prolonged education has reached an extreme climax in the youth movement which provides college education to thousands of students at taxpayers' expense. This promotes socialistic insecurity. Meanwhile schools and colleges alike have neglected that most important of all the sciences, political economy.

President Quezon's Visit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines is back again in the United States, this time from Europe. Just what is the nature of the negotiations that he is conducting with our Government? If I am correctly informed, he arrived here last February and he has been away from the Philippines for five months. Of all the commissions that ever visited Washington, President Quezon's is the longest, and the end is not yet in sight.

This commission must be costing a lot of money. Who is footing the bill, Uncle Sam or the Filipinos? If it's the Filipinos, we may sympathize with them. For rent alone, Filipino students tell me, the commission is costing over $150 a day! If it's Uncle Sam who is paying the bill, why are not the negotiations completed as soon as possible to save our Treasury much money?

To the average American, President Quezon's movements are beyond understanding. He is supposed to be "negotiating" with the officials of the State Department in Washington, but he is staying in New York City. He made a trip to Mexico City, and now to Paris. Evidently he didn't attend King George VI's coronation because his name has not been mentioned in dispatches.

Just what kind of a government is the new Philippine Commonwealth when its chief executive could be absent for six or more months? It must cost a great deal of money to phone from New York to Manila, 10,000 miles, which, I understand, President Quezon does almost every day. The funniest part of it all is that the Filipino people don't seem to miss their globe-trotting president.

Many Filipinos are complaining that the expenses of the Quezon commission are too enormous and the stay of that commission in America is getting too long. They claim that the $75,000 appropriated for the trip must be finished by this time and a new appropriation will have to be provided. Why can't the State Department officials ask President Quezon to complete his "negotiations" soon and save the poor Filipinos a lot of money which they need for education, sanitation and public works?

The Post Impressionist

Travelers.

TWO differences presented themselves immediately.

In the first place it was strange enough to see a woman driving a cab at that hour of the morning. I was taking the 4:45 a. m. train and when the taxi, which the hotel porter had called, arrived promptly at 4:15, I looked twice and discovered a woman was driving. She was a big, comfortable, competent looking woman—hatless and curly haired.

I couldn't resist one comment, "Well, it's surprising to see a woman driving this early in the morning."

"I always drive at night," she replied tersely.

This was the second exception. Unlike most Washington drivers, conversation was not her main interest.

She proved to be such a good driver, taking a short route to the station and never missing a corner, on all fours, that I complimented her.

My flattery, such as it was, loosed her tongue, a bit. She confided to me that most women didn't like to drive with her, particularly the "Senate ladies," as she specified them. She said, if by chance, one of the "ladies on The Hill" got in her cab, that as soon as it was discovered that a woman was driving, the passenger promptly got out and announced frankly, "Good Lord, I don't want to drive with a woman."

Before I had a chance to protest against this lack of feminine allegiance to feminine competence, she told me why she liked to drive at night. She said simply, "I think Washington is so beautiful at this hour, just before daylight."

I, too, had just made a mental note that Washington, after 12, is not unlike Paris. There was the same opalescent light, although a realist might have labeled it just gray fog. It was a forerunner of the dawn. The streets were deserted. Only an occasional fruiterer was open and busy straightening up his stands. There was no traffic, just a solitary motor car, whose scurrying red lights could be seen far down the street, and they were gradually diminishing.

The outlines of the buildings were just beginning to emerge from the mist of darkness. Constitution avenue looked like a lacy network of stone work. The only sentinel of beauty on the right, the Washington Monument, might have been a charcoal drawing of simple lines and massed black and white.

I looked at the scene admiringly, so did my taxi driver. To paraphrase Thoreau, she was:

The happy woman who was
With her own town . . .
She saw beauty all about her—far fields had no allure.

Not so with Joe, the driver I had on my first lap to South America. As soon as he saw the steamship tags on my luggage, he commenced to discuss his favorite hobby, which was travel.

"I see you're going to B. A.," he said.

This was my first introduction to the English shortening for Buenos Aires.

My new friend, Joe, said he had been to S. A. (South America) and he thought it was a wonderful trip.

"And have you ever been to Sweden?" he wanted to know next.

Before I could answer, he continued. "Now, that's a wonderful trip, too. They have the most beautiful ships and the most magnificent girls, all blondes."

I interrupted Joe long enough to ask when he had done all his traveling.

"Oh, I came into some money before I married and I thought it was a good time to see the world." He psused just long enough to pilot his cab through a motionless traffic jam, then immediately returned to the subject of his world travels. "And have you ever been to Ireland?" he asked next.

Hardly waiting to hear whether I had or not, he started an Irish eulogy, "Now, that's like heaven, with its hills and its dales. You never saw anything like it."

Having noticed on Joe's license card, the prefix, "Mc," I realized I must switch him from the subject of the "most beautiful place in the world," so I asked about the weather in B. A.

"Oh, it'll be hot. You can count on that. Do you have plenty of skirts? They're nice with shirt waists, something light, like chiffon."

Appreciating having a taxi driver as a fashion monitor, I sympathized with Joe because he wasn't able to travel any more.

"Oh, I'll be able to go again sometime," he said hopefully—adding wistfully, "if this business ever gets good again." MARY MACK HALL.

Modern Chakas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If this letter were put in the form of a conundrum it would sound something like this: What is the difference between Chaka, an erstwhile barbarian Zulu chieftain, and Mussolini and Hitler?

Chaka in his desire to conquer the world ordered his warriors to exterminate his neighbors and attack them on foot. Dictators Mussolini and Hitler in their desire to conquer the world ordered their warriors to exterminate their neighbors and attack them on wings.

The answer, it seems to me, is that the twentieth century gentlemen have progressed upward into a more heavenly sphere, in order to attain a celestial atmosphere where they may be guided by the rustle of angels' wings.

SPEAKEASIES.

I HAVE BEEN wondering whatever became of the smells, the official charters, the membership cards, passkeys and club titles which made up the speakeasies of the prohibition era prior to the night club and restaurant phase which led up to the final breakdown of the Noble Experiment. The speakeasy phase came first and called forth droll ingenuity and produced some strange effects.

The first one to which I belonged was housed in a little indoor hogwallow above a dairy lunch in a dirty building down behind the New York World when Park Row was still Newspaper Row. It was called Key Club because, in the beginning, every customer was supposed to carry his own key. There was no telling exactly who was the proprietor, because the Key Club seemed to have some connection with the political organization of the neighborhood and to be a political concession.

The man behind the bar was called Sport, and he had a job as prohibition agent which enabled him to ride the trucks into city from the landing point at Port Jefferson, providing safe conduct past the police who, in those early and confused days sometimes thought it their duty to assist the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment. Sport had a badge and certain paper credentials which were very reassuring to the club members, indicating that the Key Club enjoyed an advantage over the other speakeasies, which were sprouting shyly in the dark-like mushrooms, in other dirty buildings in the neighborhood. The Key Club's merchandise was supposed to be right off the boats.

• • • • •

THE ATMOSPHERE was indescribably close. All the windows were sealed, the heat was supplied by a gas radiator, the free lunch consisted of charred sausage, simmering and spitting on a gas stove, and there might be as many as 30 customers in the room at one time, all smoking and exhaling fumes.

The story of the Key Club would parallel in some respects Ten Nights in a Bar Room, for there were some young reporters inexperienced in liquor among its early customers who became hopeless rum pots in the Key Club and never came on to fulfill the bright promise of their youth.

There were frequent pass-outs among the customers of the Key Club. Men would draw blanks for no apparent reason and be stretched out across several chairs to come to at their leisure. This could not have been due to inexperience alone, for there were old-timers with little blue veins on their cheekbones among the victims. The atmosphere might have had something to do with it. But more likely the direct cause was the merchandise, for Sport soon lost his job in the prohibition forces but refrained from mentioning the fact to the members lest they lose confidence.

Long after Sport had disappeared and two other boys, brothers, had taken his place behind the bar, a confidential employe explained one afternoon that, owing to storms at sea, raids on the trucks and distributing depots and other hazards the Key Club's merchandise was largely fabricated. There might be a supply of good goods for a few days, but then a shortage would set in. So the distributors had hit upon a series of recipes. They made sherry, which was a trade leader of the Key Club, out of cooked alcohol and creosote. The creosote imparted the true smoky flavor.

A MAN started a better speakeasy across the street and down the line a few doors, with a really ornate circular bar. For some reason this became the special favorite of the printers and other mechanics of Newspaper Row, but it did not last long, which was a pity, because it was roomier and generally more sanitary and pleasant than the Key Club. The proprietor had political trouble, however, and his place was kicked in, as they used to say.

The International Hair Net Manufacturers Association was more modest than either of the others. This was a small office room containing a roll-top desk, several swivel chairs and a safe. On the wall there was one hairnet, pasted on a card. The merchandise was kept in the safe and the glasses were rinsed at a washbowl in the corner. It was primitive or shock drinking which was indulged in by the hair-net magnates. The price was 75 cents per shock, and owing to the lack of comfortable lounging facilities the members took their noggins standing up. They would crowd in four or five shocks quickly and go out to have fun swinging from the straps in the subways, beating their wives or whatever their pleasure.

For a while there were speakeasies in office suites in respectable tall buildings, patronized by the businessmen from around and about. Sometimes there would be a female reception clerk in the anteroom, and the customer would ask to see the general manager. That would be the password.

• • • •

CHICAGO never had speakeasies comparable to those of New York, because for one reason at least, the leaders of the industry could never agree on territorial rights. The constant trade war, accompanied by shooting and bombing, kept the customers in a nervous turmoil. I visited one evening a homelike little establishment under some viaduct or bridge known as the Enterprise Shovel and Wheelbarrow Corporation, and the next night somebody tossed a bomb in over the transom and blew the Enterprise Shovel and Wheelbarrow Corporation into the street.

This phase of prohibition covered four or five years and then faded into the more luxurious period of the somewhat open saloon, restaurant and night club. The Government had given up raiding, except in jerky spasms, and the adventurous feeling was present no longer.

It was an oversight of those people who collect odds and ends of things, such as postage stamps and locks of Congressmen's hair, that they did not bottle up and put away for posterity to marvel at a few whiffs of the smells which, more than anything else, distinguished the primitive prohibition speakeasy. There was a historic American odor which no artist can paint or writer write, and now it is gone forever.

Worrying

By William Lyon Phelps

Cause And Effect.

As the famous Town Meeting in New York a few weeks ago considered in public discussion the question of worry and its effects and causes, I was pleased to receive from Grace Ferris Fraher, of New Haven, a note, "I am inclosing a dynamic quotation offered for the popular mind by that great authority, Dr. Crile, of Cleveland:

• • • •

"Today, with the death-sweeping plagues entirely under control, man's greatest foes are infections and his own emotions. Infections develop fevers—the body's mechanism for throwing off poisons; fever overworks the heart and the liver.

"In much the same way, the emotions—fears, hates, worries, jealousies—cause these glands next to the kidneys to throw off this unnecessary energy, to use up, to burn up cells, to destroy the body itself. (Prolonged states of such emotions may consume as many as 100,000 brain cells—that is, in a hate 'jag' or a fear or jealousy 'drunk' you destroy an irreplaceable part of yourself."—Quoted by Frazier Hunt in Cosmopolitan, May, 1933.)

"The most eminent of Battle Creek neurologists (Admiral Byrd's physician) used the above statement in his lecture on 'Anxiety States.' Have you met this particular definition: 'Worry is a substitute reaction for action on difficult matters?'"

• • • •

Worry over the past, present, and future is bad for us; so far as worry over the immediate future is concerned, it was specifically condemned by the Greatest Teacher who ever lived; see the last verse of the sixth chapter of St. Matthew.

Worry is a poison. The more things outside of ourselves that we are deeply and truly interested in, the less we shall worry. For worry cannot be expelled from the mind by an effort of will, but only by becoming interested in something else.

Mussolini And The Millionaires

Industrialist Clique Behind Duce Seen Ruling.

By H. J. Wigham.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Rome.

GRANTED THAT the power in Italy is passing more and more into the hands of the big industrialists of the north, what does this mean for the peace of Europe? Generally speaking, businessmen and manufacturers like to consider themselves men of peace, and it would be natural to attribute more pacific intentions to the big industrialists of the Po Valley than to Mussolini, the man of war. But generalizations of this sort are frequently misleading. I am not sure that at the present juncture the attitude of the industrialists may not be more provocative, more dangerous than that of the Duce.

I cannot believe that men like Agnelli and Volpi are not as high-minded and patriotic as any group of businessmen to be found in any country. Yet their idea of what is good for Italy may not coincide with what we on the outside might think was good for the world.

To begin with, the big men of the north could not favor for a moment any let-up in the feverish war work that is creating the present boom in Italy. Opinions may differ as to the exact amount of industrial production which is caused either directly or indirectly by war orders, but there can be no difference of opinion at all about the disastrous effect which any real cutting of war orders would have on industrial activity.

Mussolini himself is just as conscious of this unfortunate condition as any manufacturer of tanks or bombs. Disagreement today is simply out of the question. For the moment the word spells panic. Not to stop the wheels now may mean a bigger panic later on. But it is too much to expect of any group of busy men that they should look too far into the future. Certainly the big millionaires of northern Italy show no signs of such abnormal vision. They are satisfied with present profits.

Rearmament Policy Must Be Justified.

BUT THE POLICY of re-armament must be justified, and in Italy it is justified every day by press attacks on the potential enemies of Fascist Italy—England and France.

Note that Russia is not the arch enemy so much as the two more democratic nations. And of the two, England excites more envy and malice than France. For this a vituperative press is directly responsible.

Usually, I think, outside of Italy, the credit for dictating the policy of the press is given to the Italian government, and the Italian government means Mussolini. This view is only partly based on fact. Needless to say, the Duce is far too busy to bother himself with press management. Perhaps if he could give the matter real thought he might change things for the better; for he himself is one of the chief victims of press censorship. And occasionally he is even made ridiculous by the antics of his own Stampa.

I am quite sure that Mussolini always gets the press clippings first that are most violently anti-Fascist. And although he seems to have an extraordinary and varied memory you will find that in regard to the American press, for example, he is more aware of his enemies than of his admirers. That is why he has occasional bursts of wrath against his detractors which are so often directed against individuals or newspapers that hardly seem worth so much gunpowder.

That was especially the case in the speech he made in the Piazza Venezia on his return from Lybia when he poured scorn on the English "pulpits" that had defamed Italy and the "turgid stream of muddy ink" that had flowed in the English newspapers. Yet all that had been said by a dean or two and by some writers of the foreign press would hardly have been noticed in the average American or English political campaign. This amazing sensitiveness to criticism on the part of the Duce arises in part at least from the fact that he is never allowed by his own press ministry to overlook any of the attacks which are made upon him abroad. In other wors, he is a good deal the victim of his own censorship.

Industrial Leaders Dictators Of Thought.

WHO THEN is responsible for the violent xenophobia of Italian journalism? There can be only one answer. If the industrial leaders did not countenance this attitude it would not exist. But their approval or condoning is not merely a passive affair. All the press takes part in the campaign of vituperation; I cannot honestly except even the more cultivated Corriere Della Sera of Milan. But if one had to choose the two most persistently and disagreeable anti-French, anti-British newspapers in Italy one would probably have to name the Stampa, of Torinto, and the Telegrafo, of Livorno. The first owned by Agnelli of Fiat fame and the second by Count Ciano, father of the foreign secretary and son-in-law of Mussolini. Agnelli is not only one of the big five millionaires of the north; he is probably the biggest. Ciano is of Livorno, and the Livornese have been called the Scotch of Italy, I suppose, on account of their thrifty habits and their determination to succeed.

If Ciano and Agnelli did not approve of the steady inciting to anti-foreign and warlike feelings in their own papers they could stop it overnight; and what is more if the "Big Five" of industry wanted the tone of the whole Italian press changed they could have it changed with ease. If it continues as it is, we may be sure that the "Big Five" want to have it that way.

That this constant backbiting in the press must increase the danger of war no one can doubt. And yet who can believe that the northern millionaires want war? The answer is that they would even risk war rather than risk a return to democracy. They are thoroughly convinced and honestly believe that fascism with all its faults is far better for Italy and the world, far better, anyhow, for the millionaires than the muddled, fluid thing called democracy in France and England and America. If they had their doubts in the past they have little now. They see the results of the Popular Front victories in Spain and France, they look with horror on the strikes in America and on the laurels won by John Lewis. And now England is having her labor troubles.

Collective Bargaining Lacking in Italy.

IN ITALY there are no labor unions, no strikes, no collective bargaining. Wages may go up a little, but never beyond the bare level of subsistence. Italy is the big business man's paradise.

There is practically no unemployment in Italy, but the industrial workers' wage is from $5 to $7 a week. It can never be any more unless Senator Agnelli and Mr. Donegani and Mr. Pirelli and Mr. Motta wish to make it more. Mussolini, as a great gift to the worker, raised all wages on May 9, "The Day of Empire." But he first consulted the guilds and the guilds are run by the "Big Five," or at least by the "Big Seven." And the "Big Seven" decided that a raise of between 10 per cent and 12 per cent would be all right. And so it is decreed. This, says the Duce, will take care of the rise in the cost of living and so everyone ought to be happy. It doesn't take care of the rise in the cost of living, but everyone has to be happy just the same. Anyhow Agnelli, Donegani, Pirelli & Co. are happy because they fixed the wage. They will always fix the wage so long as Italy stays Fascist.

Remember, these men are not necessarily hard-hearted. They are delighted to have Mussolini control food prices so as to keep down the cost of living to the poor. They are heartily for "Popolavoro" (recreation for the worker), for old-age insurance, for marriage and birth bounties, and for the many welfare activities which Mussolini keeps going for the good of the people. They even fall for his imperial ideas (when they are successful) and try to forgive his adventure into Spain.

But on one thing they are adament. They will control industry and labor wages. They even agree to high taxes, first because even if the regime is expensive, it is less expensive and far safer for them than democracy, and secondly, because in the long run they fix their own taxes. It doesn't matter what the lawful percentage of profit tax may be, it is always much, and so the big industrialist makes a fair compromise with the tax collector.

EVERYTHING that Mussolini has advocated, everything he has accomplished in the last ten years, has played into the hands of the great industrialists. They were frankly afraid of the Abyssinia adventure. They disliked the risk, and they had no confidence in the outcome. Yet that campaign has entirely changed the economic picture in their favor. There can be no comparison between the conditions in Italy today and the conditions of only two years ago. Everywhere you go, new buildings are going up, factories are working overtime and money is being poured out in new construction.

COUNT CALEAZZO CIANO, Foreign Minister of Italy. The son of a Livornese industrialist, he is a son-in-law of Mussolini.

It was the Abyssinia campaign and the preparations for it that put Italy into the front rank of the great military spenders. Every factory owner in Italy profited thereby and continues to profit. Then came sanctions, and sanctions led to autarchy. Italy could not import foreign goods; therefore she was driven to manufacture everything she needed at home. Just think what this means to the industrialist and to the capitalist.

Just imagine how Mr. Alfred Sloane and Mr. Chrysler and Mr. Eugene Grace and the Messers. du Pont would feel if Congress should decree that henceforth the United States should import no manufactured goods; in fact no goods at all except those raw materials that were absolutely necessary for their own factories; that in return for their services in exporting their manufactures to pay for these raw materials the industrialists should be allowed to charge the very highest prices the traffic would bear in the home market. Furthermore, that laws should be passed to facilitate the making of all kinds of substitutes such as cloth out of milk and motor fuel out of alcohol and finally should abolish all labor unions and allow the employers to fix wages at the lowest possible rate compatible with bare subsistence.

The most reactionary employers in the United States could hardly dare to dream of such conditions. And yet these are precisely the conditions which exist in Italy today. And they have been created largely by the war in Abyssinia and its consequences; by the very events which the capitalists disliked and feared, but which have changed Italy in two years into a capitalists paradise.

Autarchy Prescribed Only For Producers.

I do not intend to sing the praises of autarchy. Those of us who are still able to live in more or less free communities will not be helped to admire the doctrine of self-sufficiency by driving motor cars with alcoholic essence or suffering the cloudy fumes of the weird substitute for gasoline used by the buses in Rome. The attempt to make cloth (lanital) out of the refuse of milk left over from the cheese factories will hardly make up for a lack of wool, especially in the cold spring weather of Italy. Autarchy has no charms for the consumer, unless indeed the consumer has never known anything better. But it has an enormous charm for the producer.

In a previous letter I mentioned a few of the newer or increased activities of the Italian manufacturer. The Montecaztini activities alone give some idea of the spread of that network of corporations. Artificial fertilizers, new chemical products, mounting output of iron pyrites, coke, aluminum bankite, electrolytic zinc, imitation gasoline (alcoholic)—these and many more are the results of autarchy. If you live in Italy you will soon have to clothe yourself, feed yourself, propel yourself, and make up your face (if you belong to the set that uses cosmetics) entirely by using Italian products and by paying the price that the Italian manufacturer will dictate.

It would be strange, indeed, if the great industrialists of Italy did not accept fascism and pay the price that fascism demands, especially as they have much to say in determining the price. It would be equally strange if these industrialists did not lean more and more toward Germany and the Berlin-Rome axis, their greatest bulwark against the terrors of bolshevism, and the equally serious dangers of weak-kneed democracy.

Remember that before the World War the financial domination of Italy by Germany was an established fact. In those days banking was the important engine of capitalism. Toplitz and the Banca Commerciale might have been said to represent the dominant influence of the Germans. Today banking hardly counts; control of production is everything; and the men in Italy who control production have exactly the same outlook as the man who controlled Italian finances in 1914. Their spiritual home is Germany; and, be it clearly understood, not the Germany of Weimar, not republican Germany, but Germany of the Third Reich, the Germany that knows how to run industry and keep labor in its place.

Millionaires Called Bigger Than Mussolini.

AND SO in the present drawing together of Italy and Germany you will find that the big millionaires of the north are a more important factor than Mussolini himself. Not only is their ideology German, but their blood has a Teutonic strain which you will not find in southern Italy. I am thoroughly convinced that Mussolini has no desire at all to join a partnership in which he might find himself playing second fiddle. For him Hitler is still an upstart who has a long way to go before he does for Germany what he himself has done for Italy. He has already won his empire. Theoretically Germany has the same right to expand as he had, but he does not at all see Italy being dragged into a war to get back Germany's colonies for her. Fundamentally, Mussolini is a much greater admirer of England than he is of Germany. And that is one reason why England's refusal to admire everything he does makes him so angry from time to time.

If he looks on Hitler as an upstart, he cannot help feeling a little like an upstart himself in comparison with England. A few kind words from England at this juncture would keep him from that Teutonic embrace which rather repels him. Unfortunately, just when an Anglo-Italian rapprochement seems imminent something always happens to spoil the picture.

Nevertheless, Mussolini would be glad to be on good terms with England again. He would then feel secure in his empire, and could turn his attention to its development.

War On Spain

By Barnet Nover

The Bombardment Of Almeria.

THE CONTEMPT shown by the Fascist states for even the most elementary decencies of international life finds its most recent illustration in the wanton and utterly inexcusable bombardment of Almeria by Nazi battleships.

It is in line with the mass slaughter of Ethiopians by the Italian authorities at Addis Ababa following the attempt on the life of Marshal Graziani; with the systematic destruction of Guernica by German aviators; with the air raids on Valencia, Barcelona and other towns far behind the lines.

The men, women and children of Almeria who were the victims of Hitler's ruthlessness had done neither him nor Germany any harm. But with cold brutality the Nazi government decided that immediate and drastic retaliation was necessary for the attack on the Deutschland and Almeria was conveniently at hand.

It was a clear act of war on the part of the Hitler regime. And the United States Government would be shamefully derelict in its duty to itself and to civilization if it blinked its eye at this inescapable fact in determining whether the neutrality act should now apply to Germany as well as to the Spanish government and the insurgents.

• • • •

THE WITHDRAWAL by Germany and Italy from the London nonintervention committee is, in some respects, a much less dangerous development. Almeria has shown how Nazi Germany is prepared to wage war. When determined on aggression, it is now clear, the Hitler regime will make no effort to present its case to any impartial tribunal, will not even submit any ultimatum to its intended victim, but will strike with suddenness and ferocity. It is a lesson that will not be forgotten along the embattled borders of the Third Reich.

On the other hand, the refusal of Berlin and Rome to participate any longer in the work of the international control scheme and of the London committee merely dots the i's and crosses the t's of what has long been a reality.

Neither Germany nor Italy have paid the slightest attention to the nonintervention agreement when it has not been in their interests to do so. With a cynical disregard of their pledges they have continued to send into Spain large contingents of "volunteers" and large quantities of supplies. In Italy's case this went so far as to see the arrival on Spanish soil of an Italian army, wholly equipped from Italian arsenals and wholly officered by Italians. The Nazis have been more circumspect, but their efforts on behalf of Gen. Franco have equally constituted an evasion of the hands-off-Spain pledge.

• • • •

INDEED, the action now taken by the Berlin and Rome governments at London should help clear the air. Hitherto Great Britain and France have lived in mortal fear that the Fascist powers might refuse any longer to be bound by the tenuous agreement whose repeated violation, not only by Germany and Italy, but also by Russia, has been viewed as less dangerous than its destruction.

Now the worst has happened; the British and French governments may discover that nothing essentially has been changed thereby. Certainly if Germany and Italy are intent on war the nonintervention accord would not stop them, as it certainly has not stopped them from acting as though it did not exist at all. And if they are not intent on war then, obviously, it will make no difference to them that they are now in a position to aid Franco openly. They realize, no doubt, that such further aid to the insurgents may lead not only Russia but possibly France as well openly to come to the aid of the Spanish government.

What is even more important, the British and French governments now have the opportunity, if they will only seize it, of really plugging up the holes through which aid has been given to the contending elements in the civil war. There is no reason in the world why France and Great Britain between them cannot undertake the task of patrolling all Spanish waters, a job hitherto performed in part by the Fascist powers as well as by the two great European democracies.

• • • •

IN RECENT MONTHS the balance of power has swung quite markedly from the Fascist dictatorships to the democracies. Fascism in Europe has come to be on the defensive and with each passing month the totalitarian states find themselves at an increasing disadvantage vis-a-vis the democratic powers. But the Fascist powers have one trump card left to play and signs now indicate that they may be preparing to play it. They can still hold over the head of the peaceful democracies the threat of war.

At the time of the Moroccan episode, last winter, France, by a show of force, compelled Hitler to retreat But aside from this one incident the Spanish crisis has been one retreat by the democracies after another. In acting thus Great Britain and France have salvaged the shadow of peace. Now even that shadow may be lost unless the governments in London and Paris show in unmistakable fashion that in the game of force they, too, possess counters of considerable importance. If they do so the air may be cleared of the poisonous fumes of war; if not, the structure of peace may be given a blow from which it may not easily recover and possibly not in our time.

Colmery Sounds Democracy Plea

Denver, Colo., May 31 (AP).—A plea to "save America for democracy," was made here today by Harry W. Colmery, national commander of the American Legion, in a Memorial Day address.

"To save the world for democracy is a noble and courageous aspiration, but in a world constituted as it is today it behooves all of us to turn our attention first to saving America for democracy," said Colmery in a prepared speech which was broadcast over a national (C. B. S.) network.

"If other people and other nations prefer communism, fascism or Hitlerism, that is their business," Colmery added. "Our business is preserving the form and institutions of government, which in a mere century and a half have carried us to a place of leadership and contentment."

Washington's Blimp Traffic Sets Record

Previous records for passenger travel in the Goodyear blimp, which flies over Washington, were broken over the week-end, when more than 450 persons made flights during the three days.

Officials of the company said the record for one day is over 300 individual flights, established two years ago. In addition to the 450 accommodated over the week-end, many more were unable to get space for the flights over the city.

Our prediction of three years ago has virtually come true, "that dry shaving would eventually supplant the old-time razor." We base our statement on the fact that in the past 18 months, about 10 different type shavers have been placed on the market.

We were one of Washington's first merchants to see the advantage of dry shavers more than six years ago. We offer a 30-day trial.

Study Reveals Work Awaiting D.C. Pay Board

Women's Wages Below Minimum Set in '23 in Most Cases.

The minimum wage board that is to be revived in the District of Columbia has plenty of work ahead of it, judging from the results of a survey made public over the week-end by the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department.

This survey, made at the request of the House District Committee, shows women workers here are now receiving wages which, in most instances, are considerably lower than those established by the Minimum Wage Board prior to 1923.

In that year the board went out of existence when the United States Supreme Court held the law under which it was created was unconstitutional. Recently the court reversed itself and, in effect, said the law still was operative. The survey made by the Women's Bureau covered nearly 200 establishments employing 12,500 women. These include factories, stores, laundries, dry-cleaning plants, beauty parlors, hotels and restaurants.

The best weekly earnings were found in the beauty shops, the average in such shops located in department stores being $19.65 and located elsewhere, $17.80.

Reporting on its survey of stores, the bureau said:

"A comparison of current earnings with the rates in force prior to the Supreme Court's invalidation of the District of Columbia law in 1923 shows that for a representative week this spring 30.5 per cent of the women in ready-to-wear stores and 46 per cent of those in department stores earned less than the former minimum rate of $16.50 for the mercantile industry and 100 per cent in limited-price stores earned less than this amount."

The bureau reported seven-tenths of the women in the dry-cleaning plants and almost nine-tenths in laundries earned less than $15, the minimum set by the old Minimum Wage Board.

(1) 1933 . . . World's greatest refining unit built at Texas City, Texas

(2) 1937 . . . New units added. New scientific equipment added. Refinery capacity doubled . . . more than ever world's greatest and most modern refining unit!

In 1933 the flat prairie-land at Texas City, Texas suddenly became alive with industry! Giant cranes tugging at mighty beams and girders! The staccato beat of riveting machines! The world's largest refining unit was being built.

Soon this great refinery was producing New Action American Gas... millions of gallons of it! The new refinery yielded the best regular gasoline we could possibly produce. And you recognized it for the value that it was. You bought millions of gallons of it... more and more and more!

As a result of your demand for American Gas, the giant cranes returned to the Texas coast. The builders came back! The world's greatest refining unit was no longer big enough to meet the increasing demand for American Gas.

We enlarged the refinery...more than doubled its capacity. But we did more than merely increase its size. Scientists, chemists, engineers, had been busy . . . pushing science's fight against crude oil! New, improved equipment was installed. New processes perfected and patented. And as a result of these new processes and equipment we can now build greater value into regular gasoline than was ever possible before!

The new gas is ready—NOW! We named it New Value American Gas—because of its extra built-in values.

It is known as a "sweet" gas—meaning it's pure, free from undesirable odors,—and no added chemicals! You'll say it's a "sweet performer," too—in mileage, economy, smoothness!

Really, New Value American Gas sets a new measure for value in regular gasoline! Try it—it's the greatest buy in "regular" that you've ever seen or used! Stop at the Sign of Greater Values —fill your tank with New Value American Gas—then listen to your motor sing its song of smoothness and performance!

Bob Burns Says:

This Hollywood atmosphere is supposed to be the most exciting and thrilling in the world. Some people have been right in it so long, they've gotten used to it, but I've only been in it a short while and a lot'ta folks wonder why I don't get excited about it.

I come from a line of people that seem to take everything very calmly. One day, when Grandpaw Snelson and a hired hand was tarrin' the roof, Grandpaw slipped and fell off. The hired hand went rushin' into the room where Grandmaw was sittin' and says "Your husband jest fell off the roof." Grandmaw yawned and said, "Yes, I jest saw him pass the window!"

The classes in public speaking which have been sponsored by the Farm Credit Club's Educational Committee will be closed with a banquet at 7:30 o'clock this evening in the Hay-Adams House. These classes, conducted by Charles T. Akre, assistant to the trust officer of the Riggs National Bank, must have been a lot of fun. For example: At recent meetings the members have been instructed in the ways of fortifying themselves against hecklers. There is a regular technique for the handling of hecklers and with this the class was acquainted. The class officers are R. W. King, president, and Martin Uelsmann, secretary. Arrangements for the banquet were made by H. A. Lake, L. I. Peak and Helen C. Ward.

And another banquet of first interest is arranged for tomorrow evening when the Southern Society of Washington offers an affair in honor of Governor and Mrs. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, in the ballrooms of the Willard Hotel. The time is 7 p. m. Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, will serve as toastmaster. An elaborate program of entertainment has been arranged. Gov. Earle's address will be broadcast.

There he was assistant treasurer of the bank for more than seven years, and also organized and was president of the Farm Credit Administration Credit Union. He served as director and vice president of the California Credit Union League, and was editor of the California Credit Union News. Rygh is a law graduate of the University of Minnesota and served on the attorney general's staff of that State for three years.

President Harry B. Mitchell, of the Civil Service Commission, speaking before the joint convention of the Postmaster Association and Postal Groups of Florida on May 30: "During the late years there has been a levelling out of process going on under the apportionment law. Most of the great excess in appointments from the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland and Virginia came about during the World War period when the Government was compelled to get civil employes wherever it could.

"As an illustration of how the excess in these States is being gradually reduced, we find that on March 15, 1933, the District of Columbia had 10,753 persons in the apportioned service, and on April 30, 1937, there were 8,961 residents of the District in the service, a reduction of nearly 2,000.

"On the earlier date, there were 2,267 Virginia residents in the apportioned service and there now are 1,949. In Maryland, there were 2,107 and now 1,839. There were only two States in excess on the earlier date besides Maryland and Virginia—Vermont and Iowa—and now there are ten in excess—Iowa, Vermont, Nebraska, Utah, Colorado, Kansas, Washington, Minnesota, South Dakota and Missouri; and 12 or 13 others who are just on the border line, including the State of Florida.

Declaring themselves determined to move ahead with their program against pending governmental economy measures—with the frown of the A. F. G. E. headquarters upon them—all delegates to the Committee Against False Economy will meet at 8 o'clock in the Hamilton Hotel. Further steps in the campaign will be considered at this time. Meanwhile, they have announced that the long-planned mass meeting in protest against the economy moves will be held the evening of June 10, in the Willard Hotel ballroom.

Full indorsement of the action taken by their representatives on the Committee Against False Economy has been voted by the membership of I. C. C. Lodge No. 58. This was the first opportunity the members of that lodge had had formally to express themselves on the matter since the organization of the committee.

Criminal Lawyers Plan Ethics Code

New York, May 31 (AP).—The New York County Criminal Courts Bar Association announced tonight the organization of a committee of distinguished figures in the legal field to draw a code of ethics for criminal prosecution and defense.

18 Are Killed In Accidents Over Holiday

Fire, Drowning, Traffic Take Heavy Toll in D. C., Maryland.

Scores of Others Hurt During Three-Day Period.

Holiday accidents—traffic mishaps, drownings and fires—claimed 18 lives in Maryland and the District over the Memorial Day week-end.

Two colored men drowned in the Potomac near Shepherds Point southeast. The men were thrown into the river when their boat capsized. A third swam to shore safely.

The men, Louis Dennis, 33, and Genie Gibson, 31, both of Alexandria, were thrown into the water when the boat was overturned. Ace Simons, 31, also of Alexandria, who was with the men, managed to swim to shore.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, of the homicide squad, ordered Simons held at the Eleventh Precinct pending an investigation by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald. Tolson said Simons would not be charged with any offense, but was being detained until Dr. MacDonald returns to the District. The detective said it is a routine matter to hold persons from out of town until a death certificate is issued.

Bodies Recovered.

The bodies of both men were recovered from the river a short time later by harbor police.

Six persons were drowned. A young woman died after a fall from a horse and a man from a bicycle. Seven colored persons were burned to death in a tenant house fire near Marion Station. Scores of others were injured in accidents over the three-day holiday period.

Miss Adeline Kennard, 20, succumbed to injuries suffered in a fall from her horse on the grounds of the Edgewood Arsenal. She was a sister-in-law of Capt. T. H. Hickey of the Sixth Field Artillery at Fort Hoyle. Army officers said her horse bolted.

The death of the seven colored persons in the Marion Station fire on the lower Eastern Shore brought to 11 the number of fire victims within a week. Four colored victims, including three children, died of burns in a strawberry pickers' shanty Thursday near Hopewell.

The list of drownings in Maryland was the longest for any week-end so far this year. They were:

Lloyd Gates, 64, and his wife, Jennie, 49, of Cumberland, lost their lives when their automobile went out of control on a ferry boat and plunged into 15 feet of water in the South Branch of the Potomac River.

Joseph Pruitt, 13, drowned in a municipal park swimming pool at Salisbury. Efforts to revive him were unsuccessful. He was a son of Charles Pruitt, of the Snow Hill road near Salisbury.

Claude Burch, 30, of Washington, was seized with cramps while diving from a boat into the Potomac River near Leonardtown and sank. After his body was recovered, efforts to revive him were futile.

There were two water fatalities in the vicinity of Baltimore. John Plushkill, of the St. Mary's Industrial School for Boys, lost his life while swimming in a lake and James Pritchett, colored, fell from a dry dock, where he was working, into the Patapsco River.

Struck by Train.

Struck by a train at Eighth and Monroe streets northeast yesterday morning, Allen Johnson, colored, address undertermined, was near death in Freedmen's Hospital last night.

Police said the man was watching a north-bound train when hit by one going south. The train, a Baltimore & Ohio flyer, was operated by Richard I. Brown, of Cumberland, Md.

An emergency operation was performed on the man in an effort to relieve pressure on his brain caused by a fractured skull. His condition was said to be critical.

The driver of the car, Norris said, was Ben Harwarter, 46, 1932 Calvert street northwest, a cab driver.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Moore, of 24 Adams street northwest, escaped with slight head injuries in an accident yesterday at Saratoga and Philadelphia avenues, Takoma Park, Md. Their car overturned and was wrecked.

Services Tribute To Colored Hero

Memorial services for Sterling Calhoun, colored, who lost his life two years ago while trying to save two white children from drowning, were held yesterday at Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

Calhoun tried to rescue Mary and Richard Kerns, aged 14 and 10, who drowned in the Anacostia River July 10, 1935. The Carnegie Hero Fund established a fund for his widow.

At the memorial services, Elder Guy Wills called Calhoun "a man who never learned to say no when it came to a task. * * * His faithfulness and loyalty to humanity we shall ever and always remember."

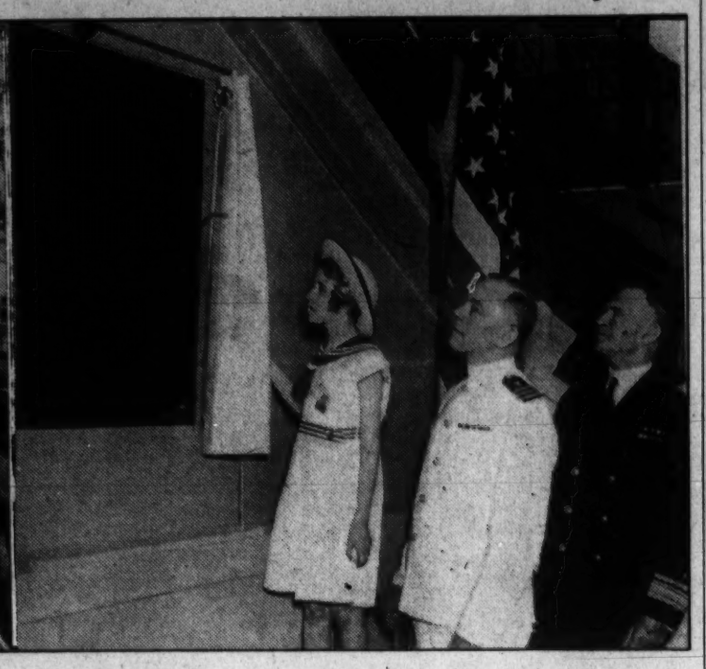
G. A. R. Veterans Hold Memorial Exercises at Battle Ground Cemetery

Post Staff Photos.

Hundreds attended exercises held at the Battle Ground National Cemetery yesterday under auspices of the G. A. R. and citizens of Brightwood. John M. Kline, commander, Department of the Potomac, was chairman. Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, delivered the memorial address.



At the Navy Department this memorial tablet honoring officers and crew of the U. S. S. President Lincoln, sunk by a German submarine during the World War, was unveiled by Janet Byrne, Commander W. L. Lind, U. S. N., formerly executive officer, the ship (center) and Rear Admiral P. W. Foote at right.

Dollar Elected Head of Taxi Drivers' Group

Reorganized Brotherhood Delays All Formal Action Till June 7.

Reorganization of the Industrial Brotherhood of Taxi Drivers, a move aimed at mobilizing Washington's 5,000 hackers to alleviate the "growing plight" of overcrowding, passed its first step last night at Mechanics Hall when a president and a board of temporary officers were elected to "organize the drivers of the city."

Erwin Dollar, member of the executive committee of the dissolved brotherhood, was elected president of the new organization after he had pledged "time, effort and support to any plan beneficial to the cab drivers of Washington."

Although members took the floor to point out their working conditions and competition problems as barriers to a "decent livelihood," no resolutions were adopted. All formal action, except the election of the officers, was postponed until a meeting scheduled for June 7.

Name Provisional Officers.

Officers who will serve in provisional capacities include Charles Leonard, vice president; John Wiles, secretary, and Herman Longhorn, treasurer.

Pointing out the lack of hack stands, Robert Desson, independent driver, told the gathering:

"We must point out to the Public Utilities Commission that more hack stands, which now accommodate only 700 cabs, are badly needed. With only this much available space, it is necessary for the remaining 3,000 cabs usually on the streets at one time, to cruise, thus tying up traffic."

Congress Called Medium.

Congress was called the medium through which action must be taken by Dollar, who said:

"There are 700 more cabs on the street now than at this time last year, bringing the total to 4,800. We must demand that a law be passed to limit the number to, at most, 3,000. Disenfranchisement as a penalty for traffic offenses could be used as a means of curtailment."

Wage, Hour Study Set for Tomorrow

Legislative action on the Administration's wages and hours labor policy bill will be put under way tomorrow with joint hearings by the Senate and House Labor committees.

Hearings were originally set to begin today, but postponement was announced by Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, chairman of the Senate group, for the accommodation of witnesses. He and Representative Connery, of Massachusetts, hope to avoid duplication of effort and complete this phase of the legislative process in a fortnight.

The first witness will be Robert Jackson, young assistant attorney general who will urge enactment of the measure. He is to be followed by Claudius T. Murchison, of the Cotton Textile Institute.

The Black-Connery bill would bar from interstate commerce the products of industries which pay less than a minimum wage, to be set by a board; violation maximum hour provisions; employ minors under 16, or refuse to deal with labor unions.

Thinning Band of G.A.R. Pays Homage to Comrades of 1861

Ceremonies at the Battleground National Cemetery, where a handful of Civil War veterans and representatives of patriotic societies paid homage to Northern soldiers who fell at Fort Stevens, yesterday concluded Washington's Memorial Day ceremonies.

The services were sponsored jointly by the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic and citizens of Brightwood. The services were held but a few yards from Fort Stevens, where President Lincoln stood under enemy fire to watch the repulse of the most dangerous attack on Washington during the war.

Under the chairmanship of John M. Kline, commander of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R., the 300 spectators and representatives of patriotic groups heard selections by the U. S. Navy Band, watched children from the public schools decorate graves and heard Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, eulogize Maj. Gen. Isaac I. Stevens, Civil War general, for whom Fort Stevens was named.

The Senator described the life and military career of Gen. Stevens. He referred to his civil life, as Governor of the Territory of Washington, and to the surveys made by him of the Northwest shortly before the Civil War.

Held Respect of Scots.

He told his audience, of whom was Mrs. C. McK. Saltzman, granddaughter of the Civil War general, how Washington State's Governor had reported to Washington the moment the war began, and how he was killed in the retreat from the second battle of Bull Run. The Senator made special reference to Gen. Stevens' success with troops, citing the respect held for him by the Seventy-ninth Highlanders, a Scottish regiment in the New York volunteers.

Included in the audience were Mme. Julia Cantacuzene, granddaughter of Gen. U. S. Grant; Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, daughter of Maj. Gen. John A. Logan, and a detachment of soldiers from the Sixteenth Brigade, who fired a salute at the close of the ceremonies.

Following selections by the Navy Band, Maj. John Deavy led the salute to the colors. Later R. J. F. McElroy read the orders of the Grand Army of the Republic, and John Clagett Proctor read a poem, "The Battleground Dead." Talbot O. Pulizzi recited Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, and Everett F. Warner the "Star Spangled Banner." The Rev. William E. La Rue pronounced the invocation and benediction. School children who decorated the graves were directed by Mrs. Angus Lamond, jr.

World War Plaque Unveiled.

Included in yesterday's observances was the unveiling of a plaque to the 3 officers and 23 enlisted men who lost their lives when the U. S. S. President Lincoln, a transport during the World War, was torpedoed by German submarines. The plaque was given by the U. S. S. President Lincoln Club, composed of survivors of the tragedy.

Commander Line Speaks.

At yesterday noon's ceremonies in the Navy Building, Commander W. L. Line, United States Navy, formerly executive officer of the President Lincoln, described the sinking of the transport 19 years ago about 400 miles off the French coast.

The tablet, unveiled by Miss Janet Byrne, was accepted for the Navy Department by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, representing Secretary Swanson. Others who took part in the ceremonies were Rear Admiral W. P. Foote, United States Navy, retired, formerly commanding officer of the torpedoed transport; Harvey D. Carter, president of the President Lincoln Club; Capt. E. A. Duff, chief of the Navy's chaplains, and Miss Hallie Carter, who placed a memorial wreath beneath the tablet. The Navy Band played.

Other Memorial Day services were held at St. James' Catholic Church in West Falls Church, where a memorial field mass was celebrated.

In the afternoon, the Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, held services at the National Soldiers Home Cemetery, honoring Gen. John A. Logan, author of the first Memorial Day order.

Abattoir Fight Given Support Of Arts Board

Opposition of King to Pant Commended by Official.

The forces fighting the Benning abattoir found one more ally yesterday when it became known that the Fine Arts Commission, in a letter to Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, had reiterated opposition to "nuisance industries."

That opposition, according to H. P. Caemerer, secretary and administrative officer of the commission, was stated five years ago when a packing company threatened to build a slaughter house near the site of the then proposed Arlington Memorial Bridge. Maemerer yesterday declared the new Gobel Co. slaughter house "should not be allowed."

"It is a great satisfaction to note that you have vigorously opposed construction of an abattoir near the Bening road, adjoining one of the chief entrances to Anacostia.

"Due to the farsighted policy of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, very large purchases of low priced lands have been made in the eastern portion of the District of Columbia for parks and parkways. This policy and every purchase in pursuance of it, have had the official approval of the Fine Arts Commission.

"The diversified hills of this section, commanding the finest view of the Old City of Washington, are sure to make it one of the most attractive residence sections of the District. This improvement awaits only the development of the park lands already owned and the opening of streets and avenues.

"To allow a slaughterhouse to be built on a direct and greatly used thoroughfare leading to the Anacostia region will retard and impair this most desirable development, take value out of large areas of property, be detrimental to Anacostia Park and delay development of the park lands.

"You will know that almost every city in the country is affected with ugly districts along one or more of its approaches. Washington has still far to go in getting attractive entrances from Maryland and Virginia. To permit the proposed abattoir extension would be a long, long step backward.

"It is most encouraging that you have taken up this very vital matter."

Savings Tax Bill May Stir Bitter Battle

Commissioners to Present Revenue Proposals at Capitol Today.

By James D. Secrest.

A battle on the present tax on intangible personal property, as well as on the bill to strengthen it, was apparent yesterday as the District Commissioners prepared to submit the tax measures requested by the Kennedy sub-committee of the House District Committee.

Charges that the intangible tax constitutes an "exorbitant" levy on savings accounts will be pressed before the House and Senate District Committees, it was learned, and members of the committees are planning to seek its repeal.

Admittedly inequitable, the intangible personal property tax was scheduled to be repealed under original proposals for income levies. Then, when the Commissioners feared that the income tax might be held unconstitutional, it was suggested that payments on the intangible tax be credited against income tax bills.

Under the program to be submitted to the Kennedy sub-committee today, however, the intangible tax is not only retained, but a bill is to be offered to "put teeth into it."

Hayward Protests.

Henry A. Hayward, formerly assistant chief counsel of the Treasury Department, has filed a protest with Chairman Kennedy and expects to carry the fight to the Senate District Committee if the House District Committee refuses to give him a hearing.

Hayward, whose complaint is that the intangible tax is unfair to holders of savings accounts, said that he had been promised an audience by Kennedy's sub-committee but that the hearing had failed to materialize.

"The District's intangible tax on savings deposits over $500 is one-half of 1 per cent," he said. "This tax is equivalent to an income tax of 25 per cent and 50 per cent, respectively, on the incomes from savings accounts of $2,500 or under, or deposits in excess of that amount as interest rates have been reduced to 2 per cent on the former and 1 per cent on the latter.

"This is excessive taxation. It is contrary to the Administration's policy of taxation according to ability to pay.

"The savings depositors are almost invariably people of very small means," Hayward pointed out. "They have generally been saving small sums for years for the most meritorious purposes, such as to provide for medical and surgical attention, to educate their children, to pay funeral expenses, and very often, such is their pride, to keep from the relief rolls.

Proposes Exemption.

"The remedy for this situation would be to exempt savings deposits from the tax on intangibles, if intangible taxes are to be continued, or to reduce to a reasonable rate the rate on such deposits, or to substitute other forms or sales taxes for the tax on intangibles."

The Commissioners are scheduled to submit the drafts of income and business privilege taxes to the Kennedy sub-committee this morning, together with bills to strengthen the intangible tax, provide for the bonding of gasoline importers and authorize the establishment of parking meters.

If the sub-committee approves the revised tax measures, despite the lack of information as to how much revenue they will produce, the whole program, including the motor vehicle weight tax, the inheritance levy and the increase in insurance premium taxes, will be presented to the House District Committee on Thursday.

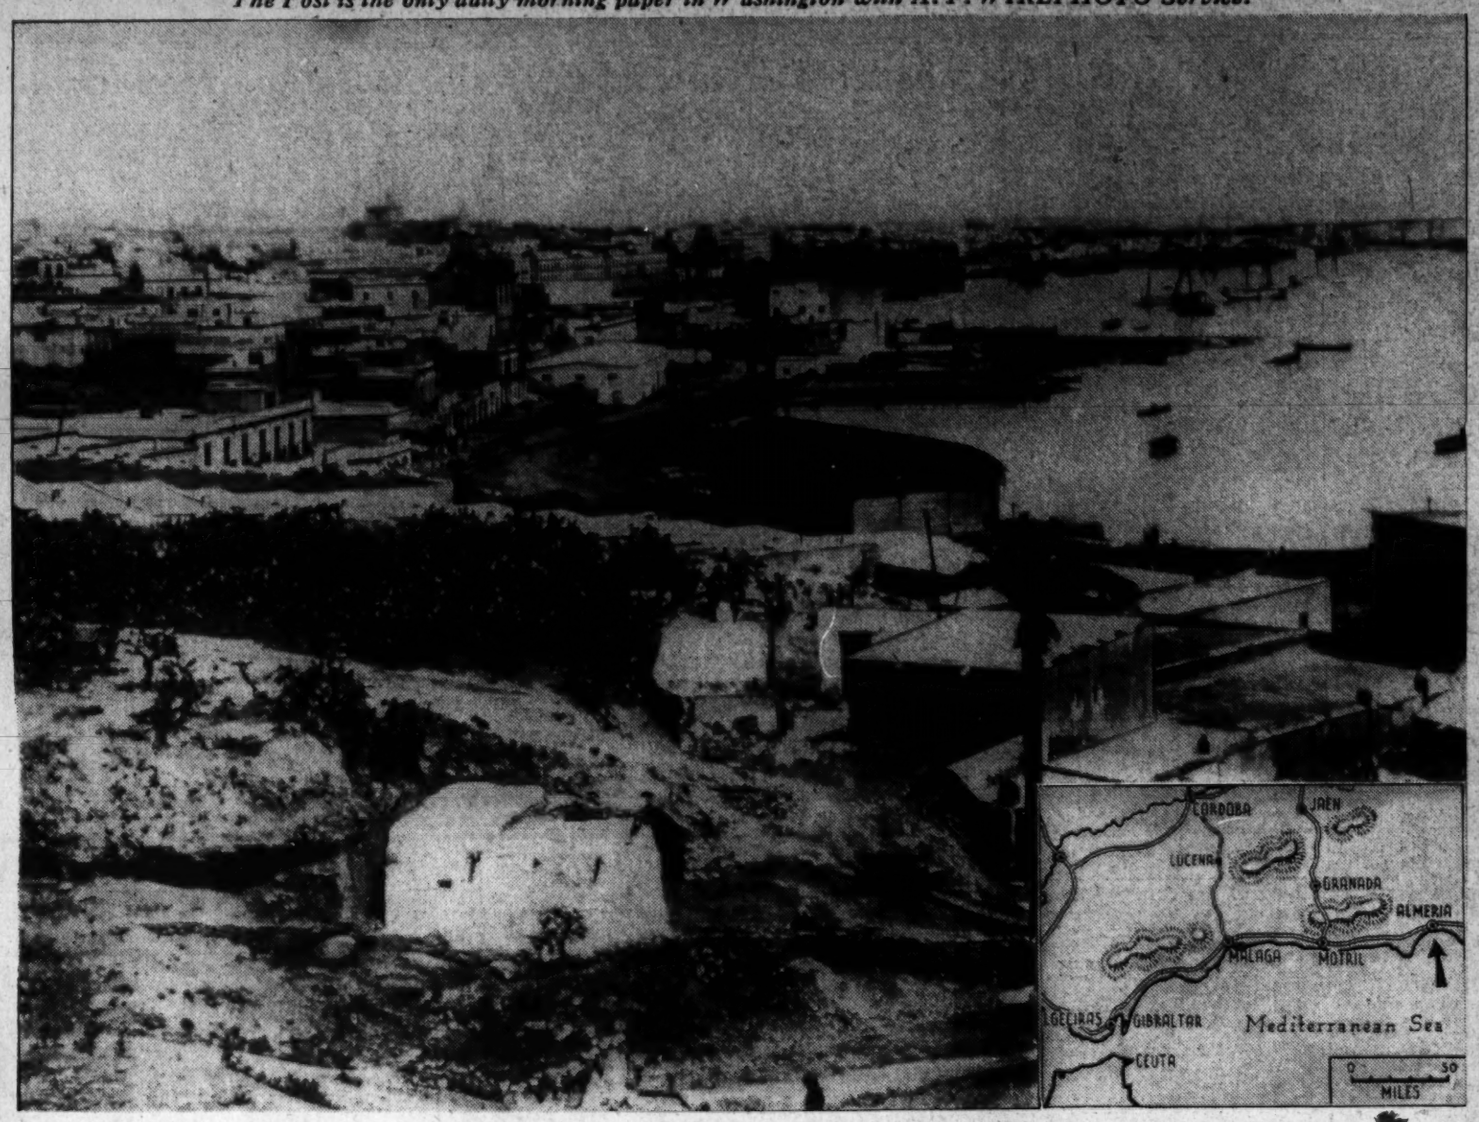
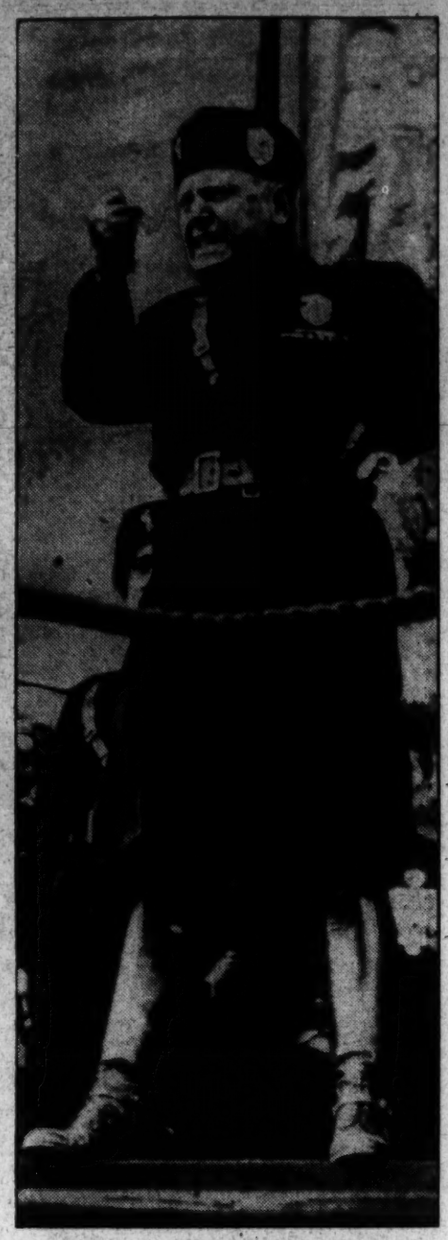
German Warships Shell Almeria; Women and Children Killed

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.





ALMERIA, SPAIN. View of the small coastal town that was ruthlessly bombarded by five German warships. The population at Almeria had been greatly increased since the arrival of refugees from Malaga, recently taken by rebels. Most of those killed in yesterday's attack were noncombatants. At Berlin, the Nazi high command, after meeting with Hitler (left), had ordered German ships to fire on Spanish vessels. At about the same time Il Duce (right) directed withdrawal of Italian naval ships from the nonintervention patrol—this was followed by reports from Valencia that an Italian submarine had torpedoed two freighters.

GERMAN CRUISER THAT SEIZED SPANISH SHIP. When the loyalist government last January protested the seizure of the S. S. Aragon in southern Spanish waters by the Nazi cruiser Admiral Graf Spee (shown above), "new measures" were threatened by Germany unless the loyalist government released a cargo taken from a German steamship in port. This was the first of a number of incidents in which German naval vessels were involved.

This picturesque Spanish town, a key point in Mediterranean warfare for nearly 3,000 years, was the scene of the bombing of the German cruiser Deutschland, which resulted in the shelling of Almeria yesterday as a reprisal. The main street of the town is shown, with the medieval castle built by Philip II in the background. It has been reported that some 400 loyalist sympathizers were herded into the great hall of the castle and executed.

Alimony Figure Leaps as Plant Faces Divorcee

By the United Press.

New York, May 31.—Phil Plant, Broadway's No. 1 playboy of the dizzy decade who has been married to Constance Bennett, engaged to the former Barbara Hutton and sued by experts, tonight worriedly watched the alimony ante go up like a fever thermometer in his latest suffle with romance.

By sundown it had reached the rather staggering total of $1,000,000, and by morning—when Phil ambles into a Bridgeport, Conn., court to see what the judge has to say about Mrs. Edna Carlton Dunham Plant's divorce charges against him—there is no telling what it will be.

Edna was in seclusion in a Connecticut retreat, reportedly having the jitters. She had them every time she thought about pretty Marjorie King, former Follies beauty. And every time she had one the alimony went up.

The last bump was $500,000 in one crack. That was when Phil's lawyers hinted they would prove Edna was never even married to the $50,000,000 son of an Oswegatchee, N. Y., hotel keeper.

Edna first began to get jittery when she heard that Phil wanted her to get the divorce in a hurry so he could marry the luxurious Miss King. She said that would cost him plenty.

The next rise of temperature—and alimony requirements—came when private detectives reported Phil had been pawing over bargain counters in Fifth avenue's better jewelry shops to find something in the way of a geegaw to force upon Miss King to cement their romance.

The mercury took another hop, accompanied by a hoist in alimony demands, when the news leaked out that Phil's socially registered mother, Mrs. William Hayward, had accepted Marjorie into the family fold—an honor that somehow escaped the second Mrs. Plant.

Will Face Legal Battery.

When Edna, who hauled her millionaire husband off Broadway three years ago and made a chicken rancher out of him, comes into court she will face a battery of Phil's lawyers who will want to know, among other things, whether it is true that Edna used to be Edna Klasky, a Boston shoe model.

Mrs. Plant, who used to go lion hunting with Phil in Africa, will try to prove that her husband was cruel, intemperate and given to romantic interludes with supposedly unidentified women.

She also hinted to friends that Marjorie will come in for some courtroom spotlighting by way of a suit for alleged alienation of affections, after she polishes off Phil.

President May Expose 'Plots' To Evade Income Tax Today

Message to Congress to Ask Closing of Revenue Law Loopholes; Action Directed Against Yacht Incorporators.

By William V. Nessly.

How wealthy taxpayers have been able to avoid or evade income tax payments aggregating many millions is expected to be revealed to Congress today when President Roosevelt sends his message to the legislators asking for the closing of loopholes discovered in tax laws.

The revelations, representing weeks of investigation by the Treasury Department, already have brought condemnation of the practices from the President. Mr. Roosevelt expressed belief at his Friday press conference that names of persons involved would be brought to light. Indications last night were a Capitol Hill inquiry will be launched at once, at which data uncovered by the Treasury will be disclosed.

It was learned yesterday that, in connection with the expected move to curb formation of foreign corporations by Americans for taxing purposes, the Internal Revenue Bureau has obtained records of testimony in numerous hearings conducted by the Securities and Exchange Commission, where the practice is said to have been revealed in several instances.

Yacht, Estate Incorporated

The incorporation of one wealthy man's pleasure yacht and one woman's incorporation of her country estate, with her husband drawing $20,000 a year as manager, already have been revealed as resorted to in order to save money for the owners on their tax payments to the Government.

Mr. Roosevelt asked whether the inventing of such loopholes was the moral thing to do.

The President's proposed legislation apparently faces a fight to turn it into a general boost in income tax rates, including those in low as well as those in the higher brackets. Senator LaFollette (Progressive), Wisconsin, who frequently has attempted to bring about such an increase, has served notice he will renew the efforts in connection with the tax evasion legislation.

More than 100 cases of tax evasion are reported to have been included in the Treasury report, on which President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau have held numerous conferences. The Treasury inquiry was prompted by the sharp falling off of March 15 income tax payments below administration estimates. All the cases reported are said to have been of individuals, as the study of corporation returns has not been completed.

Firms Delayed Payment

At the time the inquiry was begun Secretary Morgenthau indicated it was due primarily to the unusually large number of corporations which has asked extension of time in which to file complete returns. The number was said to have been unprecedented. Complete returns are all expected to be in the Treasury's hands by June 15, the second payment date.

The Treasury, meanwhile, is preparing numerous civil and criminal actions which the Department of Justice will be asked to take into court. Officials have expressed the hope an additonal $100,000,000 of revenue will be obtained as a result of the court proceedings.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, has indicated that joint hearings on the proposed legislation might be held by his committee and the Senate Finance Committee, headed by Senator Harrison, of Mississippi.

Was Native of Virginia and Was Twice Candidate for State Senate.

Born in Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., in 1860, Mr. Waller was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1881, and from George Washington University Law School in 1887. He was admitted to both the District and Virginia Bar Associations, but retired from the practice of law in 1901.

In 1901 and 1905 he was a candidate for the Virginia State Senate. Surviving are his wife, Louise G. Waller; a son, A. Nelson Waller, of Spotsylvania Courthouse, and a daughter, Mrs. William Graves Crenshaw, of Rye, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held in the Waller Baptist Church, Spotsylvania Courthouse. The church was built in 1769 by John Waller, one of Mr. Waller's ancestors. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Witness Is Hidden In Elder Inquiry

Greenfield, Mass., May 31 (A.P.).—Investigators tonight refused to disclose the whereabouts of a key witness in the State's case against Thomas Edwin Elder, 60, retired Mount Hermon School dean charged with threatening a former colleague with a shotgun.

State police said the witness, Mrs. Edity Weymouth, a bank clerk, was in seclusion pending the trial Thursday of Elder in connection with an alleged murder attempt on S. Allen Norton, 66, former Mount Hermon cashier, Tuesday night.

Mrs. Weymouth told police she saw an automobile cruising about the Norton home here early Tuesday night and then speed away from in front of the house shortly after the alleged assault.

Definite Clew To Lost Plane Believed Found

By the Associated Press.

Alpine, Utah, May 31.—An official of this village at the foot of the Wasatch Mountains said tonight "the hottest clew yet" had been uncovered in the search for a Western Air Express plane lost five months ago with seven persons aboard.

The official who asked his name not be disclosed, confirmed that "various articles" known to have been aboard the lost plane had been recovered. At the same time he denied reports the plane already had been found.

A searching party, he said, was being formed by officers of Western Air Express and the searchers—CCC enrollees and volunteers—will start up the rugged, snow drifted slopes of the towering Wasatch Range at dawn tomorrow.

The official declined to describe the "articles" except to say that letters, worn and stained by winter storms were among them. The plane vanished last December 15.

The letters, reported in the hands of Federal investigators, were said to have been found by Frank Bateman and Will Healy, Alpine natives, who have spent weeks searching out of a camp in Dry Canyon, a precipitous gorge down which spring torrents are raging.

A relative of Healy's confirmed reports the farmer had found the weather-worn l[illegible] reported to have been in the lost craft's cargo, but he refused to divulge in what section of the forbidding terrain.

Western Air Express has posted $1,000 reward for the finder of the plane.

Aboard the plane were Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wolfe, Chicago; Henry W. Edwards, Minneapolis; Carl Christopher, Dwight, Ill., and the crew—Gladys Witt, stewardess; Pilot S. J. Samson and Copilot William Bogen.

Ill Veteran Offers $4.98, 5th of Life To Get Lighthouse

E. R. Coran, a disabled war veteran living at the National Military Home at Dayton, Ohio, has sent the Government a bid of $4.98 and an offer of "one-fifth of my life's service" for an abandoned lighthouse at Massapoisett, Mass., so that he could provide a home for his wife and seven children.

Treasury officials, while touched by Coran's plea, feared his bid would run afoul of governmental red tape. The veteran failed to transmit a check or money order for 10 per cent of the offer, as required by law, and the Treasury cannot accept any bid, even if it is the highest, less than 50 per cent of the assessed valuation, which is $20,000.

Recently, J. L. Stowell, Crescent Beach, Massapoisett, sent in a bid of 1 cent for the lighthouse, which will be sold to the highest bidder June 17.

Hitler's Church Drive Assailed By Presbytery

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 31.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. took a left-handed slap at the religious program of Adolf Hitler today and declined to take a stand on President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization program.

It also referred to the church's 276 presbyteries for consideration a proposal to compel retirement of pastors at the age of 70 and adopted an overture urging the approximately 9,000 churches in the denomination to restore to their previous level the salaries of pastors which were reduced during the depression. The amount of such restorations was not indicated.

The assembly affirmed action of the German Evangelical Church in rejecting as "false doctrine" the recognition of "other events" powers, forms and truths as God's revelation, apart from the one and only word of God."

Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the Assembly Committee on Church Co-operation and Union, declared that national socialism demanded the church recognize a divine revelation in Hitler and the reality and history of the German nation," alongside the revelation of God in Christ Jesus."

The assembly's attitude was expressed in adoption of a resolution offered by the committee on church co-operation and union.

Sending "affectionate and fraternal greetings to the Christian Church in Germany," the resolution read, "we wish our German brethren to know that they do not stand alone. We, too, stand with them in the same Christian faith, and affirm with the great reformer, 'Here we stand. We can do not other. God help us.'"

The court-reorganization issue was side-stepped when the assembly, upon recommendation of its committee on bills and overtures, declined to approve an overture from the Presbytery of Philadelphia North requesting that the assembly encourage protests against:

"The passage of any measure that may render the Supreme Court of the United States, or any other court, subservient to the executive or legislative branches of the Government, or that may impair or destroy their power to preserve and defend every constitutional guarantee against destructive assault from any source."

Ruffin Rites Will Be Today In Washington

Body Will Be Cremated, Sent to Hillsboro, N. C., for Burial.

HOLLYWOOD, May 31.

Republic Pictures' program of 30 feature productions, 24 Westerns and 4 serials will be presented to the company's sales organization, meeting Tuesday at the Roosevelt Hotel, by J. J. Milstein, vice president in charge of sales. All of the company's franchise owners in the United States and Canada, New York office and studio executives, and all sales supervisors are in attendance.

Republic's new line-up calls for "Four 1937-38 Anniversary Specials," on which the company is centering all of its production resources, four pictures, suitable to play in any Class A theater.

Second group is the "1937-38 Jubilee Ten," and a third group of "Sixteen Showmen's Money-Makers."

Gene Autry again heads a series of 24 westerns with eight pictures. There will be eight "Three Mesquiteers" westerns, based on ideas by William Colt MacDonald, eight westerns from Bob Steele and four serials.

Phil Regan, singing star, is down for four productions. The comedy team of Alison Skipworth and Polly Moran is set for a pair, as are Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson.

Republic plans to use Max Terhune, ventriloquist hit of "The Hit Parade," in more important roles for the coming season.

Barry Perowne, creator of the famous character, "Raffles;" Mildred Cram, Everett Freeman, William Colt MacDonald, William Chester, Lucian Cary, Armstrong Sperry, Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson and Ann Lawrence are a few of the nationally prominent authors whose stories will be brought to the screen by Republic during the 1937-38 season.

The four "Anniversay specials" will be:

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND," Phil Regan starring vehicle, based on the popular radio program. Musical romance.

"WAGONS WESTWARD," with book by Armstrong Perry. The best available stars will be engaged for this epic of the Old West.

"HIT PARADE OF 1938," second Regan starrer. Cast of radio, stage, screen top-notchers. Planned as annual special.

Voice Recognized, False Fire Alarm Brings Jail Term

A colored man was sentenced to jail for six months yesterday because his voice was recognized over a telephone when he reported a false alarm of fire.

John M. McInerney, veteran operator at the fire alarm headquarters, told Judge Edward M. Curran he notified police "because I knew who it was" after a conversation with William A. Foreman, colored, of 1227½ Duncan street northeast.

Foreman, McInerney said, reported that there was an explosion at Twelfth and Duncan streets Saturday. The alarm was false and McInerney's alertness led to the capture of Foreman.

It was brought out in Police Court yesterday that Foreman was convicted of pulling 36 false fire alarms five years ago. He would always report the false fires by telephone, McInerney said.

Insurance Frauds Laid to Shysters

New York, May 31 (AP).—Crooked lawyers are blamed by U. S. District Attorney Lamar Hardy for the spread of an insurance fraud racket he has set out to smash. In two weeks 20 have been arrested and more will be, he predicted.

Describing the racket one "that may crop up in any big city" and how the Government broke it open, Hardy said in an interview tonight:

"Crooked lawyers are at the bottom of it. They will pick out a perfectly law-abiding citizen, often a man that's had financial reverses, and lure him into the game."

TWA to Inaugurate Night Sleeper Service

Burbank, Calif., May 31 (AP).—Night airplane sleeper service between Los Anglese and New York in 15 hours will be inaugurated tomorrow, TWA officials announced tonight.

For this once-a-day service a fleet of $126,500 Douglas transport ships, flying 218 miles an hour and carrying 25 passengers in daytime and 17 at night, will be used.

Princeton Will Award Belgian Premier Degree

Princeton, N. J., May 31 (AP).—Dr. Paul Van Zeeland, Belgian premier, who is in this country to study ways of lowering world trade barriers, will receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws at Princeton University's commencement exercises on June 22, it was announced today.

Authentic Prize Ring Films Never Will Be Missed With Pictures Like "Kid Galahad" on the Screens

New Warner Brothers Release, to Be Shown at Earle Friday, Is Accurate Reflection of the "Fight Racket;" New Magazine of the Cinema Is a Work of Art; Maxine Doyle Still Before the Cameras; News Notes of the Theater.

EXCEPT for the absence of authentic names of the pugilistic great, it seems to me, Washington boxing fans should feel slight resentment against the statutory embargo on the interstate transportation of fight films, so long as pictures like "Kid Galahad" come along.

BELL.

Here is a subject that deals exclusively with the profession of beak-busting with a simulated excitement that exceeds anything you might encounter in a whole evening of mayhem in Madison Square Garden. There are bouts in almost every reel and they go at top speed from first to last. There also is a bit of gangsterism mixed into the plot and a full measure of romance, broken up among four people who find it difficult to harmonize their variant moods and viewpoints. We shall not go into a detailed exposition of the plot here and now, but will make so bold as to say that the spectator will not find a dull moment in it.

"Kid Galahad" is the ring name of a young bellhop in a Florida hotel who is romped into the heavyweight championship of the world through the crooked machinations of his manager and his gangster rival. This role is played by a handsome young newcomer by the name of Wayne Morris. He bears an amazingly close resemblance to Randolph Scott and swings a right that would fell an ox. This young fellow seems to be going places, with his pleasant face and magnificent physique, although one wonders if he might be able to do anything else as convincingly as he does this youthful scrapper.

Of course, there is one aspect of this type of film that always will irk the habitual fight fan. That is that the young combatant who fights his way to the top through an unfailing succession of knockouts—and takes a few on the chin himself in the process—always comes out unscarred. This doesn't very often happen in the prize ring without the aid of plastic surgery.

When that sensational young featherweight, Al Foreman, a former Washington idol of the ring, was a pal of mine, being a thoroughly sane and literate fellow, I have seen him come back from the wars with black eyes, chopped eyebrows, smashed lips, a flattened nose and all of the other dire consequences of catching as well as throwing punches. He won a great majority of his fights by knockouts. So does Kid Galahad in the film, but he seems miraculously immune to the usual physical disfigurements that follow such vicious encounters as those in which he participated—especially when he was overmatched by a jealous manager who wanted to see him "knocked off."

Needless to say, I do not expect the cinema battlers to be torn to shreds in the ring, but, after all, they have makeup departments out on the West Coast who can give realistic reproductions of a great many things that never really happen.

Anyhow, "Kid Galahad" is a fast-moving and engrossing film that will engage the interest, I think, of a majority of the picture-going public by its ability to combine feminine interest with the more robust and brutal impulses of the opposite gender.

* * * *

Incidentally, Edward G. Robinson and Humphrey Bogart, one of the most sinister of the screen's "bad men," have been shooting each other down now for a long time for the lenses. They do it again in "Kid Galahad." I know of no other two players who are so perfectly adapted to each other's styles—Robinson the gabby, braggadocio sort of chap who fears no man and walks in where even J. Edgar Hoover would fear to tred; Bogart, the thin-lipped killer, who is at his best with a gun in his pocket. These two shoot it out in the last reel of the fight picture and I doubt if you will soon forget the thrill of the encounter. Two pretty fine actors, if you ask me—and even if you don't.

* * * *

There comes to this desk from some unknown source, No. 1, Vol. 1, of one of the most artistictically gotten-up magazines I have ever seen, devoted to the interests of the motion picture industry. It is called Cinema Arts and is of imposing dimensions—something like 11 x 14 inches in page size, if a footrule means anything at all to you—and consists of some 90 pages of pertinent comment upon the various phases of picture making and allied arts.

Cinema Arts is printed on a high quality of plate paper and includes color pages, as well as half-tone reproductions in black-and-white. The two color pages of Myrna Loy and of Spencer Tracy and Freddie Bartholomew, in "Captains Courageous," in themselves are worth more than the price of the magazine which, I note on the front page, is 50 cents.

If you come across a copy on a newsstand and wish to acquire something far removed from the usual "fan magazine," I suggest that you buy a copy. If I am wrong, you pay for it.

Those who may have feared that Maxine Doyle has disappeared from the studios of Hollywood should be interested to know that she has been on two local screens in feature pictures this week—co-featured with Russell Gleason, son of Jimmie and Lucille, in "Fury Below," at the Criterion, and in "Come on Cowboys," diagonally across Ninth street, at the Strand. So the kid seems still to be working. In case the identity of Maxine Doyle has slipped the casual mind, she is the little Irisher who was mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater for three years prior to the advent of Aubrey Sieber, the present charming incumbent of the post. I think by this time Miss Sieber must have eclipsed Maxine's record for continuous service.

Costars in Prize Ring Picture

Edward G. Robinson and Bette Davis, as they appear in the roles of Nick Donati and "Fluff" Phillips in the Warner Brothers' production of "Kid Galahad," coming to the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday. Miss Davis, it will be recalled, was a recent Academy Award winner for the best acting of the year before the cameras. The title role in this thriller of the fight racket is played by a newcomer by the name of Wayne Morris, whom you will like immensely.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, May 31.

HELP WANTED DEPT.: It happened at 2 a. m. at Leon & Eddie's. A visiting Southerner phoned Seymour Weiss in New Orleans. The call was made from the phone booth. When Weiss was on the wire the visitor summoned his two fair companions to the phone, ordered the piano moved to the foyer and—with Eddie Davis acting as impromptu m. c.—had the girls audition for a singing spot at Weiss' Roosevelt Hotel . . . The Louisiana politician listened—and hired them.

* * * *

BUSINESS DEPT.: Mrs. Ellen Mackay Berlin is one of the few people who have life-long subscriptions to the New Yorker magazine . . . The editors presented the subscription for an article she wrote for them—an article debunking the debutante. That article made front-page news for all the people—publicity which saved the magazine just when it was tottering.

* * * *

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Albert Bein, the playwright who wrote "Let Freedom Ring," was one of those who won a Guggenheim award this year. The award carried with it a sum of money to help foster the prize-winner's career . . . Bein is just completing his new play. It's a racketeer theme—wherein the mobster characters take over the red-light concession of the New York World's Fair!

* * * *

THEATER DEPT.: George S. Kaufman is returning from Hollywood soon, after working there on the musical comedy he's writing with Moss Hart. Kaufman did no movie work while he was in Hollywood. He went there to be near his collaborator. And his collaborator, Hart, also did no movie work in Hollywood. He went there—to be near his psychoanalyst!

* * * *

EMILY POST DEPT.: Joe Rivkin, of Columbia Pictures, who is very much in love with Leah Ray, visited eight night clubs last night. From each club he mailed a post card to Miss Ray . . . "For her birthday," Rivkin confided, "I'll send her a card—from Jack & Charlie's!"

* * * *

OBITUARY DEPT.: A short time ago Al Montlake, the Chicago gangster, was taken for a ride and murdered . . . Montlake had deserted his wife and baby in New York many years ago and then remarried. His first wife, who changed her name, still lives in New York. And his son, now full-grown, who is employed by a bank here, this week learned for the first time that his father was a gangster. He and his mother are bringing suit now, to collect their share of Montlake's estate.

* * * *

LONELY HEARTS DEPT.: During the screening of Barbara Stanwyck's newest picture, one of the extras—whose husband had died—raffled her engagement ring, to help support her son . . . Miss Stanwyck purchased a ticket and won the ring. The next day the extra received a package containing the ring. With it was a note: "I am sure you will appreciate this ring more than I will—Barbara S."

* * * *

AMBITION: Orson Welles, who is the star of "Dr. Faustus," the WPA Theater show, has received a number of movie offers. There's a movie deal for his services pending right now. It all depends upon Welles's consent. The $32.50-a-week WPA actor is holding out—for $2,500 a week!

* * * *

FAITH: Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pearl were at the Stork Club this morning, discussing political philosophies. "This kind of living is all wrong," Pearl stated. "When I walk down the street and see so many nice people who aren't as lucky, hungry people . . . well, I don't believe in it." . . . Mrs. Pearl fondled her sable jacket and sighed: "I do!"

* * * *

CHANCE: In Meyer Davis' offices one door is marked "Private." Before that door wait a number of job applicants . . . wait in vain. The "Private" is a blind. Davis' private office is in another room, unmarked, so that he could maintain undisturbed privacy . . . Some years ago a job applicant, just out of Yale, waited in front of that door for two days. Because he never was able to see Davis, the young man went his way—another way, which led to fame . . . This week he sent his autographed photo to Davis. He autographed it: "Why Didn't That Door Ever Open? —Rudy Vallee."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

The Best Opening Lead.

The process of elimination plays the most important role in the selection of opening leads. Rarely is the leader blessed with a combination of cards such as Ace-King-Queen, or King-Queen-Jack that offers a safe and at the same time constructive opportunity. Usually it is a question of selecting the least of many evils. Let us consider the reasoning that dictated the opening lead in today's hand.

West, dealer.
North-South, vulnerable.

	♠ K J 10 4 ♡ K J 3 ◇ A J 10 5 ♣ J 8
♠ A 6 5 2 ♡ A 8 7 6 5 4 ◇ Q 9 ♣ A	West / North / East / South	♠ Q 8 ♡ Q 10 9 2 ◇ 7 6 4 3 ♣ 9 6 4
	♠ 9 7 3 ♡ — ◇ K 8 2 ♣ K Q 10 7 5 3 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl.	2 ♡	3 ♣
4 ♡	Dbl.	Pass	5 ♣
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

West recognized East's raise, coming as it did over the takeout double, as a weakness bid, but still felt that there was a good chance for game if he could find fitting cards in East's hand. Shortness in spades and the diamond King, together with the advertised heart support would probably produce ten tricks.

When it came to selecting the opening lead, West reasoned as follows: A heart was out of the question. East had indicated at least three and probably four hearts by his mild shut-out bid, and North's double strongly suggested that he also had a few hearts. South's take-out of the penalty double was further evidence that he had no more than one heart and perhaps a void. In either event the lead of the Ace could do no good and might establish a trick in the dummy. The lead of the club Ace had only one virtue—that of gaining a view of dummy. As against this it meant giving up a probable vital control card and an invaluable unit of time. A diamond lead come in for full consideration but was abandoned because there seemed no need for it. Since West controlled the two danger suits—clubs and spades—he could always lead a diamond before both of these controls were lost. This line of reasoning left only one suit, and then it became a question of selecting the proper card in the suit.

West could infer from North's takeout double that spade strength would be found on his left. From the fact that South had been virtually located with one, or no hearts, it was hardly likely that he was also very short in spades. That being so, there would be little risk in leading away from the Ace of spades instead of laying down the Ace, and this underlead would retain control instead of relinquishing it. It also might have the virtue of picking up an additional trick if East had the spade Queen and declarer went wrong on a guess.

That is precisely what happened on the opening lead of the low spade. Declarer, not being able to realize exactly what was going on, made the not unnatural play of the ten from dummy. East won with the Queen and returned a spade. West won and gave East a third round ruff. The Ace of clubs increased the penalty to 500 points.

On any opening lead other than a spade the contract would have been easy to fulfill. On the spade Ace opening and continuation, declarer could merely have had to go up with dummy's King in order to hold the set to one trick.

D. C. Chinese Pay Tribute to Dr. Sun

Dr. Wang, in a brief speech, urged the necessity of close co-operation among members of his race in order to speed up reconstruction work in China.

Rumanian Gangster Wed In Cell by 6 Priests

Bucharest, May 31 (U.P.).—Rumania's notorious gangster, Corolu, married his sweetheart in a prison chapel today with six Greek orthodox priests participating.

The bride was Adele Jonescu. Coroiu's best man was the director of the penitentiary, where Corolu is serving a five-year term. The couple was permitted to have a one-night honeymoon in Coroiu's cell.

In Hollywood With Jimmy Fiddler

HOLLYWOOD, May 31.—Turn about is fair play, and since I use this space at irregular intervals to air pet peeves, maybe it will be the fair thing to give a few stars the privilege. At any rate, I invited them to speak their minds freely, and the response may interest you.

KAY FRANCIS.

Carole Lombard gets her dander up at writers who misquote her. Kay Francis dislikes candid camera men who give no warning before they click. Mary Pickford, for all her money, hates to be termed a "shrewd business woman." Jean Harlow dislikes shopping (mama does it for her). Irene Dunne cannot bear pawing men (and is Hollywood alive with them!)

Mae West stiffly refuses to be photographed in her own apartment with only one man; there must be at least two. Norma Shearer would use the whip on assistant directors who curse extras (they never do on her sets). Jack Oakie cringes from stiff collars and starch-bosom shirts. Franchot Tone would fry in oil all autograph hunters (but wouldn't he feel bad if they quit going to see his pictures)! Mary Brian can do without risque jokes.

William Powell will use every excuse to avoid female fan magazine interviewers. Herbert Marshall is actually rude to reporters who pound him with questions about his estranged wife. Joan Crawford hates talk of her humble past. Bob Burns would like to shoot people who say he is fitting himself into Will Rogers' shoes. And Spencer Tracy abhors soft men and coy women.

Chico, Charles Farrell's Great Dane, has returned home to die. Now in his thirteenth year, the old dog is greyed and weary. In his youth, he lived with Charlie in a house on Toluca Lake. Those were joyous days, when Farrell was a bachelor and the two of them swam daily in the lake. But as years filed past, the master married Virginia Valli, and they moved to her house in Beverly Hills. Of late, Charlie spends much of his time making pictures abroad and Virginia is busy at other things. Chico has been lonely.

So before his last departure abroad, Farrell rented his Toluca Lake home and arranged with the new tenants to take care of Chico as part payment of rent. The dog sprawls daily at the lake's edge, too tired now to swim, his dimming eyes rarely leaving the rippling surface of the water. I see him there on my way to Lakeside Golf Club, and I have called to him.

But he rarely moves. He just keeps staring, as though watching a vision of former years and afraid it may go away.

While I am in this mellow mood, let me relate a touching incident of a few nights ago. Leaving a preview of an important picture, I was stopped by the timid tug of a little old lady. She wanted to know if the star's gown in the big number had been beautiful. I answered that it had been very beautiful. At which she smilingly said, "I'm glad. It took me five weeks to sew all those tiny metal plates to the cloth. And I wondered how it looked on the screen." Puzzled—because I had seen her leave the theater ahead of me—I said. "But you were inside. Didn't you see the picture?" Her faded blue eyes were a little tear-brightened as she replied. "Yes, I did see the picture. But all that sewing must have hurt my old eyes. I couldn't see my dress at all."

Federal Employe Gets B. A. Degree Over Telephone

Eldon Sweezy, of the Employes Compensation Commission, received his bachelor of arts degree yesterday from Oklahoma A. and M. University by telephone.

Just as the president of the university was about to confer the degree Sweezy, waiting in his room at 2121 Military road, Arlington, received a telephone call from the commencement platform, and listened to the ceremony. He had completed his studies by correspondence.

Sweezy's father, A. G. Sweezy, a school teacher of Locust Grove, Okla., was also honored at the graduation ceremonies. He received a master of arts degree.

18 Medals Given For Flood Rescues

New York, May 31 (AP).—Two telephone company employes who rode out on cables over churning rivers to rescue men stranded during the floods of March, 1936, were awarded Theodore N. Vail medals today for "noteworthy public service."

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced the awards, along with 16 others made to groups of employes in 15 communities and to a third individual. The three men who received medals, plus $250 each, were Michael J. O'Connor, lineman, of Concord, N. H.; John J. Steck, construction foreman, of New Milford, Conn., and Robert Hildebrand, toll repairman, of Fulton, Mo.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Worried Aunt Wonders if There's Any Book Which Warns Girls of the Dangers of Alcohol.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a niece in the last year of high school who is beginning to go with a crowd that drinks. I can't help worrying about her. Isn't there some book which will tell her, in a really readable fashion, what alcohol IS and what it DOES, in such a way that she'll see that there's danger in cocktails? I don't wish to alarm her, nor do I wish to warn her in such a way that she won't "take it." I thought the indirect method of giving her a book might possibly work, but the question is—what to give? Can you help me? PUZZLED AUNT.

* * * *

DEAR PUZZLED AUNT: Some time ago the book editor of this newspaper placed in my hands an attractively bound little volume entitled, "Letters to Susan," by Margaret Culkin Banning (a compilation of articles which had previously appeared serially in one of the women's magazines) which, in the most tactful and convincing language, tells—among other things—how alcohol ravages a young girl's charm. Here is a book which would make a splendid gift for any high school girl graduate.

* * * *

Fearlessly, yet with admirable taste, Mrs. Banning (who has, it seems, offspring of her own) discusses the whole gamut of social pitfall which a modern girl is apt to encounter in tempting guise. Here is the book I would recommend for your neice. There may be other and better books dealing with the same subject matter, but I don't happen to know about them. If readers have suggestions, they will be cordially welcomed. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband, a lawyer, is a drunkard. For years he would go on periodic sprees, after which he would remain sober for as long as several months. But gradually these sprees became more frequent and lasted longer. His clientele fell away and he had to find employment, but soon lost that. He has lost every subsequent job because of drunkenness and now we have nothing. We live from hand to mouth.

* * * *

I have abandoned all hope of his ever pulling himself together. I must find work. I am a college graduate and taught school before marriage, making a good salary. I went away to study every summer, gradually getting ahead in my profession. But now I have been too long out of the teaching world to "step right back into it," as a friend has suggested. I have written and sold a few articles and stories, but not enough to make a living. Is there, however, anything along that line that I might find to do?

* * * *

I have an uncle who would lend m the money to prepare myself to teach home economics. Are these positions hard to get, after one has spent time and money preparing himself? I have heard that there are other berths than teaching which the trained home economist can fill. But I cannot learn what they are. Anything you might suggest will be deeply appreciated, Sincerely, TROUBLED.

* * * *

DEAR TROUBLED: A college graduate who has specialized in home economics and possesses, besides, a marketable writing talent, is beautifully equipped to make a name for herself as a food expert in the newspaper and magazine fields. The handicap which so many home economic specialists suffer when they attempt a career along this line is that they can't express, in readable fashion, what they really know on the subject. The home economist who knows how to get her massage across, as a rule, commands virtually her own price.

* * * *

Other jobs than teaching which the trained home economist can hold are those of demonstrator for both national and local food manufacturing concerns; dietitians in hospitals, schools and other public institutions; dietitians in hotels, and managers of cafeterias, tea rooms, restaurants, etc.

* * * *

I think you could make no better investment of borrowed money than to train yourself in this specialty, if it is one for which you feel a real aptitude. M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem.

After 24 years' marriage, wife discovers her husband has verifying talent which he sometimes employs to praise other women. She can't recall his ever having indited a verse to her. She is jealous and he thinks she's being narrow minded. Her problem will be considered here tomorrow.

1937 Finds Brides Wearing More Finery

New York (AP).—This year's bride will trail down the aisle in more finery than for many seasons.

New York's "wedding embassy," which decks out many a society notable for her wedding day, estimates that its business has increased 50 per cent. Jewelers, florists, lingerie and trousseau shops—all of them make similar reports.

Real lace is finding an open market for the first time in nearly a dozen seasons. It is being used widely in bridal veils and in wedding gowns.

Bridal parties, too, are larger and are dressed more elaborately. Where once two bridemaids and perhaps a maid of honor were included in the bridal party, groups of six and even eight bridesmaids are now in order.

New Raincape Made From Rubberized Silk

One of the new rainproof evening capes comes in royal blue rubberized silk with a V-shaped shoulder yoke of white water-proof satin. There is a peaked hood of white satin and royal blue which can be pulled up over the head for protection or thrown backward on the shoulders like a collar. The cape is long and full to protect fragile evening skirts from the rain.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Scare Operations.

My old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, has been attending the meeting of the American College of Physicians.

"Every once in a while," he says, "you meet a fellow who is so clear headed and honest that he clears up a subject that has been lying around in your mind in a sort of muddled state, and there's a relief that comes with it like suddenly getting a tight shoe off.

"That's what happened to me the other day when I went into a clinic on gall-bladder disease. It was by a surgeon, and you would think that surgeons would be in favor of operating. But not this one, and that is why he made such a hit with me. He said that when a gall-bladder gets actually inflamed it is dangerous to operate on the patient until the acute phase has subsided. So far as he knew, that was generally agreed among his professional colleagues.

"But recently, he said, a certain surgeon had been crying 'Wolf!' and saying that there was danger of the gall-bladder perforating during actual inflammation, and that operation should be done immediately in order to prevent this. This surgeon reported that 34 per cent of his acute gall-bladder infections had perforated.

"Certainly a very high percentage and difficult to explain. In a series reported from the Mayo clinic, which notoriously has accurate statistics, the percentage of perforation of the gall-bladder was ½ of 1 per cent.

"The facts are, that if a patient comes to your office and you find he has an acutely inflamed gall-bladder, if you send him to the hospital in his car, there is less danger of his gall-bladder perforating than there is of his having an automobile accident on the way.

"Why do doctors allow themselves to say such scarehead things? Well, it isn't very creditable of them, but the real reason is that the only way they can persuade some of their patents to have an operation is to scare them into it. And they use this fear of a dangerous complication whether the facts justify the fear or not, as a club to beat the patient into submission.

"It is a bad practice," said Dr. Gibbs with some heat, "and should be exposed. People who exaggerate the dangers of a disease in order to get more operations should be drummed out of the profession."

There are several acute inflammations which occur inside the abdomen which are best not operated on during the acute stage because the patient is too much in shock. Besides the gall-bladder, there is acute inflammation of the tubes. When the acute stage has passed, it is safe to do the operation. The patient usually feels better then and wants to put it off. But he should remember that the attack is likely to recur and should co-operate with the surgeon and make such practices as Dr. Gibbs described unnecessary.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The care of the Hair and Skin."

Cotton Frocks Show Sophisticated Styling

Summer Clothes Have Comfort Without the 'House Dress' Look

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

COTTONS are playing ambitious roles this summer. Gone are the days when a little cotton frock, purchased for coolness and washability, definitely lacked style and had much the appearance of a house dress. The 1937 creations are as well styled and designed as any of the more pretentious silks and other fine materials noted for smartness.

For daytime wear, the new cottons are surprisingly smart. Printed frocks with their own jackets or unlined fitted coats of self-material or contrasting colors—they are really an amazing feat in the field of designing this season. Frocks without the benefit of jacket or coat are also worthy of much favorable comment. These are cleverly styled with flattering necklines, jabot frills, quaintly puffed short sleeves, flared skirts, lace trimming and bits of hand work.

In the realm of prints, there has been a complete revolution in pattern. "Life-size" flowers now have replaced the more conventional and stylized flower prints of other years—that is, if you are the type of person who wants to wear the last word in any style trend. Cotton prints exploiting different nations are also smart and a bit different from the usual run of pattern in this fabric; you can go Russian, Mexican, Italian, English or All-American, in your choice of colorful design. Accessories help to accent the chosen country in both design and color theme.

Not satisfied with appearing in stellar roles in the fashion picture in their own right, cottons have merged with other materials most effectively. There is much combining of cotton with silk, from the sheer organzas to the sturdier piques. White cotton of either classification just mentioned, combine beautifully with black, navy or brown taffeta, or satin, both as trimming and in jacket and coats, topping cotton frocks. These styles generally fall in the line of the afternoon or more formal street costumes.

These glorified tubsters (cottons) are not only the epitome of chic and coolness, but have the added qualities of resistance to wrinkling, permanent finishes which make them as attractive after tubbing as when new, and being sanforized (pre-shrunk), do not shrink with numerous washings. The brilliant new color tones, too, are permanent, being treated chemically, to retain their vivid or subtle tints after tubbing. Such vibrant tones as fireman's red, royal blue, canary yellow, bright deep green and muted tints, including turquoise, melting violet, dusty pink, are typical of the variety in the cotton color chart.

TIME was when an inner-spring mattress was so costly that only the finest hotels and the wealthy would buy them. Later it became possible to buy one for $40. Today, at a cost of $9 and up, we convert old mattresses into this new type that gives years of slumber comfort.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 31.

WE ARE NOW entering the period traditionally devoted—at least among our sex—to brides. As I am a sleuth of the deepest dye, professionally, I have devoted the past week to the bride situation and have emerged from the social and clothes markets with the hardly thrilling news that it looks like a white year.

ALICE HUGHES

Some of the best local marriages of the next few weeks will be all white. The brides will make those promises in white satin, and the eight young ladies in their entourage will wear white marquisette with simple round collars. The bride will struggle with a bouquet of white roses, but the bridesmaids will carry pink buds of the same species.

Naturally, there will be rebels against this all-white dictum, and quite properly. Tinted bridal parties always have been popular, and pink is a highly popular color for the march to the altar on father's arm. I have also located a local wedding at which the bride will wear lilac mousseline, and the bridesmaids will wear yellow, with the maid of honor decked in apple green. This, of course, will be one of our more colorful matings.

The June bride tradition is a very puzzling one, to me. I have never quite been able to figure it out. But it exists, and will continue to, and all the rest of us can do, as the band leader dusts off his "Lohengrin" music, is to wish the girls well. It is a tragic thought, perhaps, that five years will see so many of them in Nevada!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I enjoyed a little thrill and I hope to pass it on to you, when I learned that Kenton Kilmer, son of the late poet, Joyce Kilmer, will be married tomorrow to Frances Frieske in France. Kilmer was killed in France in July, 1918, while on reconnaissance with Col. Bill Donovan, of the New York regiment, "The Fighting "Sixty-ninth," and long after his untimely death his poem, "Trees," became amazingly popular. His lovely widow, Aline Kilmer, is one of the finest living poets.

* * * *

Sheila Barrett, the Texas girl by way of Washington, who has become the greatest mimic of our day, tells me she is on her way to historic Central City, Colo., for a summer engagement. This means that big Sheila will do her Garbo at a night club adjoining the famous old Opera House when Ruth Gordon finishes her performance as poor dear Hedda in Isben's "A Doll's House." I'd give anything for a look at La Belle Barrett in Colorado!

* * * *

And when it comes to romance, I know none lovelier than that of Philip Merivale, 50, and Gladys Cooper, the famed British beauty now in her late forties. Her divorce permitted them to marry, after devotion of years! May they end their days together in great happiness!

Mrs. Emil Hurja Found Excitement in Coronation

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Back in Washington after a trip to London during the coronation, Mrs. Emil Hurja reports "Britain's biggest show was all—and more—than I expected."

Seeing the kingly procession moving slowly, majestically, toward Westminster Abbey on the morning of May 12 . . . attending the coronation ball . . . observing other visitors from all points of the globe—all these were part of what Mrs. Hurja now recalls as a kaleidoscope of events "that seem as if they could not have taken place."

The Hurjas returned to Washington Saturday and are now at their home in Georgetown. Mr. Hurja will leave this morning for a business trip to New York. In July they expect to go to California to spend some time, but they will keep their house in Georgetown until September.

Impressed by Loyalty.

Yesterday, discussing her London visit, Mrs. Hurja said she was particularly impressed with the spirit of loyalty and love for the King, shown in every word and action of British subjects. "Indeed, the adoration for the King gives, at first, the impression that the Duke of York has been completely forgotten, and that the present ruler is the only man in the world who could symbolize the unity and strength of the millions of Britishers scattered all over the globe," she said.

"But if you talk long with the average Londoner, you find he is very much concerned about what's going to happen to the man who might have been king. The impression he is forgotten is a superficial one. He and Mrs. Warfield are by no means scratched off the slate."

The outstanding feature of the coronation ball, as Mrs. Hurja described it, was the colorful pageant that re-created the coronation of Queen Elizabeth, with Margot Asquith playing the role of the virgin ruler. Seated in a box next to the one occupied by the Duke of Gloucester and his family, the Hurjas had a splendid view of the entire event and glimpsed among the guests a number of Washingtonians, including Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, and Mr. Clarence Hewes.

Attended Author's Party.

Another gay party the Hurjas attended in London was in the spacious apartment of the noted journalist, Webb Miller, author of "Found No Peace." Guests there represented an interesting cross-section of coronation visitors—ranging from Sir Hubert Wilkins to the Duncan sisters, and from the Hurjas to Elizabeth Arden.

From first to last, the flying trip to London and the holding of a ring-side seat at coronation festivities are among Mrs. Hurja's most treasured memories. "It was all so wonderful," she said with a sigh, "I'm sorry it's over."

Mrs. Dunn will sail July 3 with her daughter, Countess Guy de Baillet Latour, for Italy, and Mr. Dunn will join them in August. Count and Countess de Baillet Latour will arrive in New York June 7, from their home in Brussels.

Miss Nancy Newbold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold, will entertain at a buffet supper and treasure hunt next Sunday evening. Players will be assigned a partner and given a piece of poetry which will reveal the clew. The hunt will be held in and around Washington.

The Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti will entertain at a cocktail party preceding the hunt. Countess Roberti will leave July 3 to be bridesmaid in a wedding in Lenox, Mass., and will then go to Beverly Farms for a week's visit with Mrs Joseph Leiter. They will spend the rest of the summer in Washington.

Mr. F. H. Ellis, Mrs. Taylor to Be Wed Today

An important event in Washington society will be the wedding today at 1 o'clock of Mrs. James D. Taylor to Mr. Franklin H. Ellis, son of Mrs. Gist Blair, of Washington. The marriage will come as something of a surprise as the couple had given no announcement before hand of their wedding date.

The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride, 1529 Thirty-third street, the Rev. Allen A. Stockdale officiating. Only relatives and a few close friends will be present. The bride will wear a beige lace dress, a large brown hat and a corsage of orchids.

On their return from a wedding trip, Mr. Ellis and his bride will make their home at 1529 Thirty-third street. Mrs. Taylor is the widow of the late Col. Taylor, an Army officer, and has made her home in Washington for several years.

Mr. Ellis was graduated from Harvard in 1906 and is engaged in the brokerage business in Washington. This will be his second marriage.

Lyons-Schmitz Nuptials In Holy Comforter Church

Miss Ida Virgil Lyons, daughter of Mrs. Virgil Tancill Lyons, of Washington, was married yesterday morning to Mr. Edmund George Schmitz, son of Mrs. Anna Wessling Schmitz, of Odebolt, Iowa. The Rev. Patrick J. Begley performed the ceremony, which took place at the Holy Comforter Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Ernest Louis Lyons. Mrs. Duane Myron Paul was matron of honor, Miss Evelyn Pearse Choate was maid of honor and Miss Margaret Ellsworth Fowler and Mrs. William Frank Devine served as bridesmaids. They wore frocks in pastel shades of organdy with halo leghorn hats trimmed to match their dresses and carried old-fashioned bouquets of spring flowers. Mr. John Clarence Link, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man, and ushers were Mr. Clarence Benjamin Lyons, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. William Frank Devine, Mr. Duane Myron Paul and Mr. Franklin R. Putnam, a cousin of the bride.

Following the wedding a reception was held for the families and friends at the residence of the bride's aunt, Miss Martha Katherine Tancill. The bridal couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Lyons, mother of the bride, and by Miss Tancill. Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Schmitz left for a wedding trip to New York. After July 1 they will reside in Colonial Village, Arlington, Va.

Miss Wright Selects Wedding Date.

Miss Hilda Wright, of Washington, daughter of Mrs. Archibald Wright, of Portland, Oreg., has selected Monday, June 14, as the date of her wedding to Mr. William Lawrence Broad, of Syracuse, N. Y. The ceremony will take place at the Haverford, Pa. home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Bancroft.

Both Miss Wright and the bridegroom-elect took part several years ago in the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Swope, who will serve as matron of honor and usher in theirs. Formerly residents of Washington, they recently moved to Ossinning, N. Y. The bride's other attendants will be Miss Gertrude Bancroft and Mrs. Eliot Cogswell, of Cambridge.

Mr. Gowing Broad will serve as his brother's best man and the other ushers besides Mr. Swope will be Mr. Henry Broad, another brother; Mr. Dudley Orr, Mr. John Mulford, Mr. Bailey Aldrich and Mr. Robert Pennock.

Underwood & Underwood.

DuPont Home Reception Set After Wedding

1,000 Guests Will Meet Bride, Mr. Roosevelt After Marriage.

A reception for 1,000 guests at the duPont home will follow the wedding on June 30 of Miss Ethel duPont and Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. Since the Church of Christiana, Hundred, in Wilmington, holds only 300, the ceremony itself will be witnessed by only the heads of the many duPont families, close relatives of the Roosevelts, very intimate friends, members of the Cabinet and a dozen close school friends.

The young couple has decided on white lilies and palms as decorations for the altar of the church, and dozens of white taper candles for the chancel. Miss Aimee duPont, younger sister of the bride-to-be, will be maid of honor, and Mr. John Roosevelt, younger brother of Mr. Roosevelt, will be among the ushers. The rest of the wedding party has not yet been decided, although it will include either six or eight bridesmaids.

The Rev. Endicott Peabody, headmaster at Groton School, where the bridegroom-elect studied, will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Frederick Ashton, the duPont pastor, who, by coincidence, is the son of the Roosevelt family's Hyde Park pastor.

Miss Marion Train Will Wed on June 10

Miss Marian Langdon Train, daughter of Commander and Mrs Cecil Train, of Chevy Chase, Md., has selected June 10 as the date of her wedding to Ensign Amos Townsend Hathaway, of Bakersfield, Calif. The ceremony will be performed at the home of her parents, Chaplain Edward Duff officiating.

Miss Cecil Train will serve as her sister's only attendant. The ushers have not yet been definitely decided.

Society Youngsters Help Parents at Post's Horse Circus.

Daring Riding Keeps the Audience's Interest Despite Heat.

By Dudley Harmon.

It was a field day out at Fort Myer yesterday for Washington children, to say nothing of many of the grown-ups who had remained in town over the holiday. Children were everywhere — diplomatic, Army and Navy, and just plain residential. They carried lunch baskets to the spectators, gawked at the horses, helped their mothers sell beer—in some instances dared to sample the latter, without much success.

The climax of a hot and dusty afternoon was the musical ride and the rodeo, when expert horsemen dressed in Wild West chaps and ten-gallon hats fired blank cartridges in the air, jumped through rings of fire, and were dragged across the ground hanging onto the horse's tail. Less horsy spectators who had begun to droop a bit in the heat sat up straight and hung over their boxes when they clattered onto the field. An Army band played loudly and cheerfully throughtout, showing a special fondness for "Valencia."

Refreshment arrangements yesterday were in charge of Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright, wife of the commandant of the post. Assisting her were a group of wives of Fort Myer officials. Mrs. Wainwright looked cool in a white sports frock with brown accessories and a green scarf at the neck. Pink linen was chosen by Mrs. Harry C. Larter, who was a member of the beer detail, and with this she wore a white straw hat.

Miss Myers Present.

Almost as much a part of Capital horse shows as the horses themselves is Miss Louise Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, who takes part in everything equestrian. Yesterday she rode her favorite mount, God o' War, in the ladies' hunter class and the hunter team class. In the latter division the sire of Man o' War was ridden by Lieut. John R. Pugh, and Biskra-Mel, another of her mounts, by Lieut. J. L. Hines, jr.

Mrs. Leslie Carter won the ladies' hunter class, with Miss Jane Kromer, daughter of Gen. Kromer, Chief of Cavalry, second. Other women who competed for the prizes were Mrs. John F. Landis, Mrs. Marshall Frame and Mrs. N. H. McDowell. Mrs. Landis' daughter, Mary, won the children's jumping class in the morning.

Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff, wore a blue cotton frock with a white figure. Others present from Army ranks were Capt. and Mrs. Vernon Evans, who were in a box with Col. J. C. Grain, Mrs. C. E. Raynes and several others. Miss Marian Reybold, sister of Capt. John B. Reybold, who did so much to make the society circus at Fort Myer a success, was in a box with Mme. Wankowicz, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, her small son, and Mr. Michael Budny, attache of the Embassy.

Miss Ekengren Looks On.

Miss Christine Ekengren, who rides often, was a spectator yesterday for a change. She was in a box with Mr. and Mrs. Reed Thomas, Mrs. Ruth Rhoden and Mrs. Mils Asten.

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis occupied a box with the Greek Minister, Mr. Demetrios Siclianos; Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill, of the State Department; Frau Scholz, of the German Embassy, and her sister, Fraulein Gabriele von Schnitzler. The latter wore a pink linen frock with a blue scarf, a pink hat and dark glasses. Frau Scholz topped off her white sports frock with a navy blue sailor.

Suffragist From Japan Visits D. C.

Mrs. Edward Gauntlett Is Here for Conference of W. C. T. U.

The Post Club Editor.

MRS. EDWARD (C. TSUNE) GAUNTLETT, first vice president, Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Japan; Japan Woman's Suffrage Association; president, Woman's Peace Association; president, Pan Pacific Women's Association—so reads the business card of a quiet, smiling little Japanese woman who arrived here yesterday morning for the W. C. T. U. world conference.

She had come from San Francisco, where she landed May 12, visiting friends in Los Angeles and in Chicago en route and always making speeches where she stopped because there was a demand for her to address meetings as soon as her presence in a city was known. She has been in Washington before—the last time in 1930, when she attended the conference on the Cause and Cure of War at which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt presided. From here she will go to New Rochelle, N. Y., to visit Mrs. Catt, who was responsible for her starting the movement for woman's suffrage in Japan in 1921. She received her inspiration for the work in 1920 at the meeting of the International Alliance for Woman's Suffrage and Equal Citizenship, of which Mrs. Catt was then the leader.

A luncheon was given in New York in Mrs. Gauntlett's honor at the Women's University Club by the committee on the Cause and Cure of War and the New York branch of the Pan Pacific Women's Association June 14.

Looks Less Than Her Age.

It was hard to believe the unassuming little woman who sat beside me in the roof garden of the Washington Hotel had been leading great movements among the women of the Orient for 40 years. She did not look much older than that herself, and yet she spoke of her six children and four grandchildren, and reviewed the years of work with optimism as to the success of the causes she leads.

In all three, education is the most vital factor, she says. In the temperance movement instruction is being carried on chiefly through the elementary schools, to 27,000 of which books on temperance have been supplied for ten years. There is less public drunkenness than in the past, she believes, and the younger people in Japan, although they drink, do not indulge to excess.

The plan of an awakened public sentiment is being followed also in work for woman's suffrage there. At first lobbying was carried on, but now the workers are stressing education instead. "We want women to be ready to use the vote intelligently when it comes," said Mrs. Gauntlett. "If a mistake were made in the beginning it would do serious harm."

Two associations have been formed, the Japan Women's Christian Suffrage Association and the Japan Women's Suffrage League, which embrace the non-Christian group. Through a joint committee, the two associations work side by side in the suffrage cause. Miss Fusae Ichikawa heads the league and Mrs. O. Kubushiro the Christian women's organization. In the recent movement inaugurated for clean elections in Japan, the women received recognition in being asked to serve on the national committee and in Tokyo alone 46 women's organizations are now co-operating with the men's groups to insure the integrity of the vote.

China-Japan Understanding.

Mrs. Gauntlett feels a better understanding between the women of China and Japan is most important to friendly relations between the neighboring countries. She went to China recently in an effort to bring this about, calling on influential women there and exchanging views with them. On her return to Japan she addressed groups of women in all the important cities and some of the villages, pointing out what Japan owes China for its ancient culture, and explaining some of the problems faced by the Chinese. "They are a fine people and a great nation," she said, "and we need to learn to understand each other."

Mrs. Gauntlett will call at the Japanese embassy during her stay here to pay her respects to the Ambassador and Mme. Saito, whom she knows well, and she also will call on the Minister of Canada and Lady Marler, who were in Japan for seven years before coming here.

"There were many tears when they left," said Mrs. Gauntlett. "They were much loved. I may safely say Lady Marler was the most popular and generous diplomatic hostess in Tokyo. They planned the beautiful new legation and often opened it for meetings of women's groups."

Going to Vancouver.

From New York, Mrs. Gauntlett will go to Vancouver, B. C., to preside at the conference of the Pan Pacific Women's Association, which will be attended by nearly 200 delegates and many other visitors, representing 16 countries. The conference will deal with social welfare, education and its adaptation to social changes throughout the world; the youth movement for peace and the technique of rousing public opinion, the traffic in women and children and population pressure.

Those who expected to see the Japanese delegate appear in Oriental dress when she arrived yesterday morning were disappointed. She has followed the styles of the Occident for 40 years, she confided, and only wears her native kimono when she is asked to do so in a foreign country, where it is a novelty. Those she has brought with her were gifts just before she left, from her children and a close friend, who assured her she would need them on her journey. Yesterday she wore a black silk frock of Japanese crepe, with tiny design embroidered in color, and the little bow-knot of the W. C. T. U., in the form of a gold brooch, set with pearls.

Conventions Hold Spotlight in Capital Club Programs

Miss Childers Married Here

The arriage of Miss Dorothy Nell Childers, of Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Childers, of Columbia, Mo., to Mr. Willis Stuart Haynes, of Silver Spring, took place yesterday at 5:30 o'clock in the Bethlehem chapel of the Washington Cathedral. Canon Raymond L. Wolven officiated in the presence of immediate relatives. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Haynes left for a motor trip through the Alleg'anies.

Mrs. Haynes is a graduate of the University of Missouri School of Journalism and College of Arts and Sciences in the class of 1933. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta, Theta Sigma Phi and Kappa Tau Alpha sororities. Her father is well known in Missouri journalistic circles. He was formerly editor of the Columbia Herald and assistant professor in journalism at the University of Missouri. Mrs. Haynes holds the distinction of being one of the first "second generation" graduates in journalism. That is, she was one of the first children of an alumnus in journalism to receive her bachelor's degree in journalism. Her grandfather, Mr. H. F. Childers, was editor of the Troy (Mo.) Free Press, and was president of the Missouri Editors Association.

Her husband is pastor of the First Baptist Church in Jackson and when other duties take him out of town for a Sunday, she is prepared to fill the pulpit.

IT IS NOT SURPRISING to learn that women who are leaders in such enterprises as the Florence Crittenton Mission have other distinctions as well. Mrs. Dora Shaw Heffner, of Los Angeles, one of the two women members of the national board of the mission and former international president of Phi Delta Delta, women's legal fraternity, won her laurels in law after she was 40 years old. She took a law course then at the University of Southern California, in order to carry on the social welfare work in which she is now engaged, as referee of the Juvenile Court of Los Angeles County, hearing cases of boys. When I asked her about the old theory that a person learns nothing new after 30, she laughed and said it hadn't been hard to prove that a fallacy.

Mrs. Raymond James Jordan was matron of honor, and the Misses Catherine Simmons and Frances Cary served as bridesmaids.

Cherrydale Y. W. Camp Opens Today

36 of 44 Available Accommodations Are Already Taken.

VACATION LODGE, in Cherrydale, Va., today opens officially for the season as a summer residence for business women. The lodge has been conducted by the Y. W. C. A. for 27 years—during May and October as a place for picnics and week-end outings of special groups and the rest of the summer as a country home for business girls in Washington who commute back and forth.

Miss Charlotte King, for several years director of the lodge, is returning in that capacity this summer after several season's absence, during which she has been in charge of the dining room at Elizabeth Somers Residence of the Y. W. Miss M. O. Buckingham, a member of the Y. W. C. A. staff from 1907 to 1932, is new chairman of the Vacation Lodge Committee.

It is opening today with 36 of the 44 available accommodations reserved. There are 18 porch beds, six double rooms and 13 single rooms. The lodge has ten acres of ground around it, much of it woodland, and there are garden plots which have been developed by the girls themselves. Most of the residents change from business to sports clothes as soon as they reach home in the evening and either sit and read on the porch and under the trees; play tennis or tramp through the woods.

The lodge is on Military road, only 30 minutes from Washington by bus or street car. The girls have breakfast and dinner there, both of which are included in the reasonable price of lodging. There are few regulations except as to meals, which, of course, are at stated hours. They are all served at the gay green tables on the screened porch.

There is an air of hospitality about the building, with its long living room, big fireplace and comfortable furnishings. The summer residents, although representing many professions and a variety of interests, always find pleasant associations and form warm friendships during the season.

Mrs. James Craig Peacock is retiring chairman of the Vacation lodge committee of the Y. W. C. A., of which she has been head for six years. Under her regime many improvements have been made, putting the lodge in excellent condition. This year new electric wiring, a new roof and new plumbing are projects for which her committee has been responsible.

The Chevy Chase Chapter of the "Y. W." also gave money this year for the erection of a shelter; for a rustic chair for the picnic ground at the lodge and for the purchase of new mirrors.

Those registered for the present season include Miss Golda Bashan, Miss Elsie Boelter, Miss Mary Louise Brown, Miss Margaret F. Carroll, Miss Cala Davis, Miss Wandalee Davis, Miss Grace Donaldson, Miss I. Fonner, Miss Katherine Forsyth, Miss Josephine Green, Miss Alberta Huy, Miss Florence A. Ives, Miss Florence Kerr, Miss Margaret Lawrence, Miss Marion Lermond, Miss Mary Alice McCabe, Miss Rose Malsky, Miss Joyce E. Morrison, Miss Ruth Mulaney, Mrs. F. S. Rioting Flares At Ohio Mill of Republic Steel

Horner said he was "quite sure" there would be no further trouble.

4,000 in Parade.

Sunday's blood-spattered battle scene was quiet. The union rallied its forces for a parade from Indiana Harbor, Ind., to neighboring East Chicago, Ind. Union officials estimated 4,000 persons marched behind a banner inscribed:

"In memory of our fallen heroes of the Republic Steel picket line."

Only eight pickets marched before the main gate of the Republic plant on the far south side of Chicago, and the number of police was sharply reduced.

Federal, county and city investigations of the vicious battle already were under way.

Police searched the battlefield, where 200 officers had routed a crowd of marchers they estimated at 1,000, for weapons. More than 70 bludgeons of wood and steel were recovered.

Inquest Is Today.

Coroner Frank Walsh set the inquest for tomorrow.

Paraders, ending their march today in East Chicago, stood in silence for a minute with heads bared in tribute to the battle victims.

Van A. Bittner, regional director for the S. W. O. C., an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, told the throng:

"If we can get the evidence, we are going to have those policemen indicted for murder in the first degree."

Denying union leaders planned any violence when a mass meeting turned into a march on the plant Bittner said:

"If we had intended violence yesterday, would our men have gone down there armed with nothing more than an American flag?"

One of the two victims identified was found to be Joseph Rothmund, an employed baker and WPA worker. He had been shot in the back. Police questioned his widow to learn why he was with the strikers.

The other identified victim, who died of a skull fracture, was Earl Hanley, a striking carpenter at the Inlund Steel Co. Inlund, along with Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., closed its plants when the strike was called at 11 o'clock last Wednesday night.

Clash in Gadsden, Ala.

Gadsden, Ala., May 31 (AP).—Conflicting reports about labor trouble circulated today in this Southern center of Republic Steel operations, after a street encounter in which Bob Thomas, employe several years ago of Republic's Gulf Steel plant, was injured.

Thomas was admitted to a hospital, but released a short time later.

Police Chief S. L. O'Brannon said Thomas would not talk about the incident and he had been unable to learn the identity of the man's alleged assailants.

Drowning Victim's Body Recovered

The body of Robert Pogue, 27, 416 Second street northwest, was recovered from the Eastern Branch near the Benning Power Plant yesterday after it had floated to the surface.

Henry G. Jarvis, 336 Adams street northeast, watchman at the plant, saw the body and summoned harbor police. The body was removed to the Morgue.

Pogue drowned Friday while swimming.

Mexico City, May 31 (AP).—A band of armed men made an unsuccessful attempt to destroy a railroad bridge southeast of Mexico City today to prevent four tank cars of gasoline from reaching the capital.

It was the first outbreak of violence reported in Mexico's nationwide strike of 18,000 oil workers. The tank cars were consigned to the government.

Appeals Tribunal May Act on Application for Writ of Error.

By the Associated Press.

Wytheville, Va., May 31.—The future course of Edith Maxwell's two-year-old fight for acquittal on a charge of killing her father hinged tonight on action of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, which may pass on her application for a writ of error at its June term opening here tomorrow.

The twice convicted girl's petition was filed with Justice George L. Browning, of Orange, ten days ago and it is believed the court will announce its decision during the coming term on whether it will review the former Wise County school teacher's case a second time.

Convicted last December for the second time on a charge of slaying her 52-year-old parent, Trigg Maxwell, with an unnamed instrument, Miss Maxwell immediately launched a new effort to escape the jury's prescribed punishment of 20 years in prison.

Circuit Judge Ezra T. Carter, however, overruled a motion for a new trial last March, and the slender brunette again carried her plea to the State's highest tribunal.

The State Supreme Court awarded her a new trial last September on the grounds evidence at her initial trial was insufficient to sustain the verdict of first-degree murder and 25-year penitentiary term. The second jury recommended the maximum punishment permissible under Virginia law for second-degree murder.

In addition to appeals from circuit courts of western Virginia, the Supreme Court will have five cases removed from Richmond on its docket here.

Motions will be heard tomorrow preceding the call of the Commonwealth and privileged docket. Twenty-nine cases are listed for argument during the Wytheville session.

All seven members of the court are expected to attend.

130 Doctors Attend Clinic On Eye Surgery

Delicate OpticalOperations Described in Course at G. W. U.

One hundred and thirty doctors came back to school yesterday at George Washington University for the largest postgraduate clinic the school has ever held. Study of the eye, or ophthalmology, was the subject of a six-day course.

Most spectacular of yesterday's lectures dealt with plastic surgery of the eye, given by Edmund B. Spaeth, of Philadelphia, who told of improved methods in delicate optical operations on the eyelid, which is frequently distorted by scars or disease.

Mucous membrane grafts, in which the inner lining of the lid is entirely removed and replaced with skin from the inside of the mouth, restoring the power of movement to lid and eye, was described in detail.

Dr. Spaeth, frequently using lay language, told the doctors how to take a slice of skin from the mouth, pin it on a flat board, or "even stretch it over the end of your thumb," and scrape off unwanted tissue, then insert it under the lid where it will grow.

Another interesting operation for large scars on the outer lid consists of cutting a long, narrow strip from the forehead, leaving the tongue of skin attached just at the corner of the eye, and sewing the strip into the eyelid hole left when the scar has been excised. The hole in the skin of the forehead is stitched together, leaving a hairline scar.

Last night a forum was held on the general subject of ophthalmology. Lectures are to continue from 8:30 a. m. to late evening for the rest of the week.

Shaw Wins Indianapolis 500-Mile Grind in Record Time After Seven Attempts

25,000 SEE NATS TAKE DOUBLE-HEADER FROM A'S, 6-3, 6-1

Hepburn 2d By Seconds In Thriller

Runner-up Continues in Grind After Illness Causes Brief Halt.

By Charles Dunkley,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Indianapolis, May 31.—Victory finally caught up with dapper Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, today after seven attempts to win the Indianapolis 500-mile race, America's classic of the speedways.

In a record-breaking performance, Shaw roared to triumph, finishing by the inconceivably close margin of two seconds ahead of the veteran Ralph Hepburn, of Los Angeles. Their thrilling duel kept a record-breaking crowd of 170,000 spectators roaring in tense excitement in the dramatic closing miles of the race.

Hepburn, overcome by heat midway in the race, climbed back in his car to drive the remaining 87 miles and fought it out with Shaw every inch of the way. Only 14 seconds separated them when they started their last two laps and he continued his desperate challenge until the finish.

Shaw covered the 500 miles faster than any driver ever whirled around this 2½-mile brick course before. His time was 4:24:07.81 to average 113.580 miles an hour, eclipsing the previous record of 109.069 miles an hour established by Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., in winning the event a year ago.

Ted Horn, of Los Angeles, finished third, with Meyer fourth, nearly 10 miles back of the flying leaders. Cliff Bergere, of Los Angeles, took fifth, and "Wild Bill" Cummings, of Indianapolis, one of the pre-race favorites, pulled up sixth. Billy Devore, of Kansas City, finished seventh; Tony Gulotta, of Kansas City, eighth; George Connor, of San Bernardino, Calif., ninth, and Louis Tomei, of Los Angeles, tenth.

Nineteen of the original 33 starters survived the gruelling grind. The blazing heat and the terrific speed knocked out 14 cars.

Snyder Breaks Down.

Jimmy Snyder, one-time Chicago milkman, was among the first to surrender. He was forced to quit after covering 65 miles due to a broken transmission. He took the lead after covering 12 miles, and set such a terrific pace his car was unable to stand up under it.

Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif.; Babe Stapp, of Dallas, Tex.; Mauri Rose, of Detroit, national A. A. A. driving champion, and Kelly Petillo, the former Los Angeles truck driver, also were among the withdrawals due to motor trouble.

Not until the winner had finished was there an accident or even a driver scratched. Then the car driven by Floyd Davis, of Springfield, Ill., gamely struggling miles back in an attempt to land in the money, crashed into a wall on the north turn. Davis and his mechanic, Dee Toran, of San Diego, Calif., were picked up unconscious and rushed to the field hospital. Their injuries were said not to be serious.

The 34-year-old Shaw earned about $40,000 as a result of his triumph. He received $20,000 in cash as first prize, $5,500 in lap prizes and close to $15,000 from automobile accessory firms and gasoline companies.

Drove Without Relief.

Shaw, rated as a cagey driver, drove a masterful race and went the entire distance without relief. He stopped only twice to replenish fuel and change tires and was never worse than third. After losing the lead to Hepburn three times, Shaw regained it and kept it to the finish, breaking records as he tore over the bricks.

When they waved the checkered flag, signalizing him as the winner, Shaw and his mechanic, Jigger Johnson, waved their arms in salute to the thunderous ovation the crowd gave as they came tearing across the finish.

No race was ever closer. Shad said Hepburn gave him the hardest battle that he ever had on the speedway and that he was worried plenty in the closing seconds, fearing Hepburn might overtake him.

Shaw was third at the end of the first 50 mile and then led until 150 were reeled off. He regained the lead again at 250 miles and held it until the 300 mark. At 350 he dropped back to third place due to a quick stop at the pits, and was second at 400, with Hepburn out ahead of him.

Forces Motor to Limit.

Then, chewing gum more vigorously than ever, Shaw drove the accelerator down to the floorboard, forcing his throbbing four-cylinder engine to its very limit of power. Around the track he roared, with Hepburn in immediate pursuit.

Today's race was the seventh speedway contest for Shaw. In 1927, his first race, he finished fourth. In 1933 he was second to Lou Meyer, third in 1934, driving relief for Lou Moore, and close behind Kelly Petillo when the game little Italian won in 1935. Shaw was a favorite to win last year's race but after leading for some time his radiator cowling became loose and this cost him many precious minutes in the pits, making repairs. As a result he finished seventh.

Don Budge, Grant Make Grand Slam

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Forest Hills, N. Y., May 31.—Under a scorching sun that was only a few degrees hotter than the brand of tennis they turned on over the holiday week-end, America's youthful Davis Cup team today completed a grand slam at the expense of the luckless Australians on the turf courts of the West Side Club Stadium.

Nothing but individual prestige was at stake in the final two singles matches, but red-headed J. Donald Budge, of California, and Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, jr., diminutive Georgia "giant killer," won them both to make the final score 5 to 0 in favor of the United States as the North American zone finals came to a one-sided conclusion.

The invaders extracted their one and only set from the wreckage of their 1937 hopes when 18-year-old Jack Bromwich rallied from 3—5 to capture four straight games and the third set before yielding his duel with Budge by scores of 6—2, 6—3, 5—7, 6—1.

Grant, the 125-pound "giant killer," then capped the climax of his brilliant debut in the Davis Cup "big time" by trouncing the veteran Jack Crawford, 6—0, 6—2, 7—5. Until the Anzac's last-ditch rally prolonged the third set, Grant had Crawford more completely at his mercy than did Budge on the opening day.

Although today's play was an anti-climax, inasmuch as Budge and his California partner, Gene Mako, had sewed up the series with a doubles triumph the day before, the showing of the Americans sent this country's Davis Cup stock soaring to its highest level in years.

The United States squad, under the astute captaincy of Walter L. Pate, sails this Saturday for England and the decisive tests on Wimbledon's classic turf. Germany, picked to win the European zone finals, looms as a more formidable obstacle, in the opinion of experts, than the cup-holding British, now minus the services of Fred Perry after four victorious years.

The Australians passed out of the picture under discouraging circumstances. Illness cost them the services of their best two players, Adrian Quist and Vivian McGrath, in the singles. McGrath was able only to play in the doubles. Quist, kept out entirely by the effects of a severe attack of intestinal "flue," was in a hospital today after developing a case of jaundice.

Bromwich made a much better showing against Budge than he did against Grant. There was no doubt about the outcome, however, barring a sun stroke for the Californian, when the young Australian staged his third-set rally. The keen edge of Budge's game was missing as the yielded four straight games after being within two points of straight-set triumph at 5—3. Bromwich, playing beautifully with either hand or both, broke the American's service no less than four times in this set.

The crowd of some 3,000 spectators, including the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, gave Bromwich a big hand for his rally, but Budge came out after the rest period to mop up the match without further argument.

Mickey Cochrane Improves

New York, May 31 (U.P.).—The condition of Mickey Cochrane, catcher-manager of the Detroit Tigers, who suffered a fractured skull in a game with the New York Yankees last Tuesday, was reported "improving" at St. Elizabeth's Hospital tonight.

Johnny Pena Faces Trouble In Bout With Lou Gevinson

By Bill McCormick.

Larruping Lou Gevinson, the fighter upon whom the spotlight is focused on the police benefit card at Griffith Stadium tomorrow night, has rounded into the finest fighting fettle of his career in a long seige of training behind closed doors.

Gevinson's training has been done in the strictest privacy for one primary purpose. The former District amateur featherweight champion has been attempting to perfect his defense against a body attack and at the same time devise a plan of thumping the midriff of Johnny Pena, who will be his opponent on the coppers' card.

Whether Lou has achieved this purpose or not no one but those very close to him will know until tomorrow night. It is quite evident that during the training campaign Gevinson has whipped himself into the very acme of physical condition.

If Gevinson has accomplished only one of his prime purposes he undoubtedly will be able to dump the lad who conquered him in a previous bout. In that bout Pena rose from the floor twice to win an upset victory simply because he kept poking both hands to the midsection.

Lou had absolutely no defense for a body attack, and therein lay the story of his defeat. If he has perfected his body defense—and a defense will have to be perfected to withstand the experienced onslaught of ringwise Pena—then Lou will be better than an even-money bet to reverse the previous decision. If, by chance, Gevinson has learned not only how to protect his middle, but to dish it out in the body, Lou should practically be able to name the round in which he will apply the snore to Pena.

Pena, too, is reported in the best of condition for his return engagement with the District's pride and joy. Under the careful handling of Ray Arcel, the noted trainer who seconded him in his first fight against Gevinson, Johnny has achieved the best condition he has known since the days when he almost ruled the featherweight roost.

Arcel will second Sandy McDonald, of Texas, who will meet Alexandria's Bob Tow, and Tom Chester, the colored middleweight, who will ta[illegible] on Ossie Stewart.

All of the out-of-town fighters who will appear in the card comprised of five ten-round bouts will be in Washington by today.

Pena, McDonald, Stewart, Chester and Joey Archibald (who will meet Ray Ingram), will work out between 3 and 5 p. m. at Turner's Arena. Norment Quarles and his opponent, Howard Scott, Ingram and Tow all will conclude their training at the Eleventh Street Gymnasium. Gevinson, if he works at all, will labor at the National Guard Armory in private.

Army Poloists Defeat Harvard

By the Associated Press.

West Point, N. Y., May 31.—Army's unbeaten polo team trounced Harvard, 11 to 3, today. Harry Wilson, captain and No. 3 star, and Skiddy von Stade, who plays the same position for Harvard, were the individual stars, but Wilson got much better support from his teammates. Wilson fell heavily in the third period but continued to play.

Harvard kept pace with the Cadets for the first three chukkers but was unable to keep it up when Army's long shots began to hit the mark. Brett, Army's new back, gave an excellent account of himself, scoring three goals and having many saves.

Sixth Inning Rally Produces Winning Runs in the Nightcap

By Shirley Povich.

Firing a 23-hit salute to all sectors of banner-bedecked Griffith Stadium banner-bedecked Griffith Stadium in the Decoration Day doubleheader, the Nats decorated the swooning Philadelphia Athletics with a pair of defeats yesterday.

They caught the A's in the throes of a seven-game losing streak and applied the eighth and ninth straight defeats to Connie Mack's despairing young men.

It was done in full view of 25,000 fans in summer wear, with shortsleeves the predominant sartorial note. They won the first game behind the pitching of Carl Fischer by putting a 4-run crusher on the A's in the opening inning to triumph, 6 to 3. But that second game was no sinecure until the Nats came up with 6 runs in the sixth, to win it, 6 to 1.

Nats Take Lead Early.

The Nats came out swinging in that first game and created a 4-run fuss in the opening inning against young George Caster, who had outpointed 'em in two previous engagements this season. If it had been a fight, they'd have stopped it in that first round.

The Griffith boys laid to against Caster with two out and Buddy Lewis resting on first base following a single to right. Then the firing became general. Johnny Stone whaled a single to left that put Lewis on third and then he stole second.

Then Al Simmons beat out a hit to Newsome that the A's short stop was lucky to get a hand on, and Lewis scored. The next gent to go to bat was Joe Kuhel, who happened to be leading the whole league in triples. Kuhel didn't do anything to injure his standing because he hammered his eighth three-bagger of the season into left center, where Roy Johnson got his gloved paw on the ball after a cross-country run, but couldn't hold it.

Stone and Simmons scurried home on that blow and Kuhel followed a bit later when Travis came up with the Nats' fourth successive hit, a single to center, that all but decapitated Caster.

There was a run scored by the A's in the ninth, but it wasn't very interesting.

It was a superb pitching job by Monte Weaver, the thin man, which kept the Nats in that second game and restrained the Athletics to one run until the Washington athletes could come along and win it.

And by winning that second game, the Nats zoomed out of seventh place in the standings, leaving that lowly post to the A's and taking over sixth place.

Weaver was a fair country pitcher again yesterday as he recorded his fourth victory of the season by limiting the A's to six hits. He never permitted more than a single hit in any inning.

But despite Weaver's magnificent effort, there was grave doubt how that second game would end as late as the sixth inning when the A's were in possession of a 1-run lead, acquired when Bill Cissell walked in the fourth and Roy Johnson tripled to the centerfield corner.

The Nats had muffed an inviting scoring chance in the fifth when Cecil Travis opened the session with a well-spanked three-bagger to right center. They couldn't get him home from third base despite the fact that none were out.

But the ball game blew up in young Lynn Nelson's face in the sixth. The 25,000 were proud of the Nats in that inning. Because it was a display of shrewd, inside baseball and straight-away slugging that pulled Washington up from behind.

Buddy Lewis, whose habit it has been to start more batting rallies than any other Washington hitter, started that one in the sixth with a clever bunt toward first base that he beat out for a hit. Manager Bucky Harris deigned not to sacrifice and Buddy Myer bashed a single to left that put Lewis on second.

That was hot stuff for the 25,000 and they implored Johnny Stone to keep matters stirring, which he did by beating out a bunt to Nelson to fill the bases. That put the issue squarely up to Al Simmons.

But Simmons didn't disappoint. He interrupted one of Nelson's pitches on the business end of his bat and second baseman Bill Cissell barely did manage to knock the ball down. But there could be no throw and Lewis crossed the plate with the tying run.

Visions of an uproarous rally began to fade when Joe Kuhel lifted a short fly to Moses that scored nobody, but the Nats scored their second run of the inning when Cecil Travis flied to Roy Johnson.

Fat Shanty Hogan breathed new life into the uprising, though; when he whaled a two-bagger to leftfield. It would have been a three-bagger had not a small boy leaped from the field boxes to grab up the ball which had eluded Outfielder Johnson. Stone crossed the plate, but Simmons, who had also dashed home, was recalled to third.

He wasn't there long. Monte Weaver—himself, personally—violated all rules of the pitchers' union by making a hit, a single to center that scored both Simmons and Hogan. That wasn't all, either. Ben Chapman singled to right, and when Moses let the ball skid past him, Weaver scored all the way from first with the Nats' sixth run of the inning. It was all very exciting.

Guckeyson Breaks Javelin Mark as Maryland Wins A. A. U. Track Crown

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Since that afternoon in Philadelphia when Manager Bucky Harris took him aside and half-apologetically explained that the Nats were benching him for weak batting, Al Simmons has been creating a terrific fuss with his bat.

POVICH.

It was a new experience for Simmons when Harris benched him that day, May 2. The fellow had a lifetime batting average of .345 for his 14 seasons in the big show and folks always said he would hit as long as he was able to get to the plate, even if it was with a rheumatic shuffle.

Harris was wondering how the black-browed Pole would take it, but Simmons put him at ease. "Sure," he said, with a nod of agreement, "shove somebody else in there. I'm not hitting and nobody knows that better than I do. But I'll come around."

And he has come around. He got back into the lineup the next day after his successor in leftfield, Freddie Sington, went hitless, and he's been a fixture ever since. The long sliver of a bat which brought him two American League hitting championships began to function almost immediately.

He's played 27 games since he got back in the lineup and he's made 35 hits in 111 times at bat. Unless this department's arithmetic is faulty, Simmons has been hitting for an average of .315 in those 27 games.

And if you want the answer, Simmons will give it to you himself.

"I've just gone back to the old style of hitting when I was a kid in the big leagues," he says. "I'm not up there trying to outguess the pitcher any more. I'm trying to be too smart about it. I'm just hitting everything that comes up there that looks good to me, that's all, and it feels more natural."

He's gone hitless in only four games of that 27-game stretch since May 2, and his hits have been counting. Scan the batting averages and you'll find that Simmons leads the Nats in runs batted in. He has been getting terrific production on his hits, even though it has been only in recent games that his average has climbed to respectable figures.

During the past week, at Boston and at Griffith Stadium yesterday, Simmons' hitting has been especially potent. It has been the type of hits off his bat as much as the quantity that has delighted Manager Harris—those rollicking line drives to dead left and to right center that always rocketed off his bat in those salad days with the A's.

There's no sense denying that after the first two weeks of the season, Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith were doubting the wisdom of their purchase of Simmons from the Tigers. He wasn't hitting and, moreover, there was a distinct and faulty hitch in his batting stroke.

But they never did doubt that he was not a splendid fielder. "There's none better—never has been—in going after those hits down the leftfield line," said Griffith. "Simmons can scramble after those bal's and hold legitimate doubles to singles. Because there's no outfielder in the league who can get a throw away as fast as that fellow. He always takes it in throwing position.

At that, Simmons' outfielding has been a treat to Washington fans. The veteran has made a base canard out of the hints in out-of-town papers that he is inclined to loaf when he is with a losing team. The Nats have certainly been a losing team thus far this season, but if Simmons has been loafing these eyes haven't noticed it.

On the contrary, there has been none among the Nats who has hustled to quite the same extent as Simmons. During his batting slump he realized that the only item of his play that was keeping him in the line-up was his fielding and he truly gave of that.

* * * *

Just to make this piece complete Pollyanna-like, at a time when the Nats are laboring in the second division, it must be noted that there can be no complaints with the pitching efforts of Monte Weaver this season.

* * * *

If Bucky Harris were asked point blank who is the best pitcher on the Washington Club at this writing, he would unhesitatingly choose Weaver, who was not very highly-ranked at the start of the season when the names of DeShong, Newsom and Appleton were supposed to embrace the entire good in the Washington pitching staff.

* * * *

But the fragile Weaver has come along to be an absolute standout with the Nats. That 6-1 victory he achieved over the A's was his third straight and the fourth of the season. In 62 innings of toil this year he has allowed exactly 15 earned runs. That is an average of 2 earned runs per game. If there's another pitcher in the league who can boast such figures, his name has escaped everybody—including his manager.

Master Lad Wins.

Agawam, Mass., May 31.—Master Lad, 3-year-old star of the C. P. Miles stable, won the Memorial Day Handicap for a purse of $1,000 at Agawam Park today as all crowd and tote records were broken. A crowd variously estimated at from 20,000 to 24,000 wagered more than $300,000 to break all records for this track.

Miller Tops Record for High Jump

By Lewis F. Atchison.

In pretty much the same manner as schoolboys labeling textbook covers with plain and fancy scribbling, a trio of muscular young gentlemen yesterday inscribed new records in the books at College Park in the annual District A. A. U. track and field championship games.

Only two were recognized as official, however, for one was the handiwork of a Luray, Va., contestant, one George L. Corbett, who competed at the invitation of the committee in charge although ineligible for the championship.

The other culprits were Bill Guckeyson of Maryland, who sent a gleaming bullet-nosed javelin hurling through space to a new mark of 208 feet and 5 inches, and Ed Miller, a teammate, who lifted his lean, angular frame 6 feet 2¾ inches over the high-jump crossbar. In each instance they broke their own records.

It might be well to add that Maryland, paced by the above pair, won the team championship with plenty to spare, scoring 42 points. Catholic University was second with 20, and the Washington Track and Field Clubs third with 16.

Long Throws.

The nonchalant manner in which Corbett tossed around the steel pieplate positively amazed the 500 spectators who witnesed his efforts. Accustomed as they are to medicine throws of 135 feet and less, his toss of 153 feet ½ inch was something to marvel at. By way of comparison, Elmer Babb, of Gallaudet, won the championship with an official heave of 120 feet 4¾ inches.

Guckeyson's achievement culminated long weeks of tedious practice and a determination to set a field mark for future Marylanders to shoot at. Before getting off his first throw he dropped a handkerchief on the ground 206 feet from the foul line and promised to he would hit it. He missed, missed by more than 2 feet, but it was a happy error.

Miller's record-breaking high jump was more or less expected, as the former Eastern High School star has climbed over the bar at 6 feet 2 inches before. He had no opposition to speak of in the event.

The three most exciting races of the program were the mile run, quarter-mile, and sprint medley relay—all won by Maryland or former Marylanders.

Chronister Wins.

Mason Chronister, the Terps' talkative star, caught Joe Burnett, of Gallaudet, with a blinding burst of speed at the head of the home stretch and ran him into the ground to capture the mile. His time of 4 minutes 30.8 seconds was a disappointment, however, as he confidently promised a new record for the race.

He later returned to the track and with similar tactics permitted Stewart Reeves, of Georgetown, to lead all the way before catching him in the stretch and beating him to the tape by a good 2 yards. Again his time was slow, although it is well to note that the field in both mile and half-mile races loafed along at easy paces.

Maryland's freshman team took the medley relay, thanks to a sterling 220-yard leg by Hulshart, and equally good anchor by Jim Kehoe. Hulshart regained most of 25 yards lost by Archer as he took the baton from Miller, and Kehoe, pacing himself nicely, overtook Fred Mix, of Catholic University's A team, in the stretch and won just about as he pleased.

George Bogan, A member of Georgetown's speedy relay team, who competed for the Washington Track and Field Club, scored a double in the sprints, winning without being unduly extended. Another smashing victory was credited to Warren Evans, Maryland alumnus, who emerged from retirement to whip Stewart Reeves, Georgetown freshman, in the quarter-mile by virtue of a strong stretch run.

The complete team scores were Maryland Frosh, 15; Gallaudet, 10; Georgetown, 7; Georgetown Freshmen, 6; Washington Boys Club, 3, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, 2; unattached runners, 28.

Getting Under the Wire and Over the Bar in A. A. U. Meet

U. meet at College Park. Lower, George Bogan, running under the Washington Track and Field Club colors, captures the 220-yard race for a double-sprint victory.

Post Notes on Fishin' . . . By Bill Ackerman

ACKERMAN

If you had your choice of streams—as most trout fishermen have—where would you do your fishing? Where are the trout? Are you one of those that each year eagerly consult the annual reports to find with what and how many your favorite stream is stocked? The proof of most streams is in the fishing of them, but this year West Virginia wardens have made that unnecessary by giving early season reports on just what the angler can expect to find on the waters patrolled by them. Most certain to be appreciated by the legion of Washington fishermen that have indicated that this year they are going to fish the well stocked streams that with the equitable open season that Virginia now has, is sure to produce the maximum of sport.

The reports by counties are as follows: Randolph: A number of streams are open after being closed for three years—Roaring Creek, Left Fork of Middle Fork and Two Spring Run on Gandy, all in the upper Tygart Valley. Consult local warden for regulatory details on some sections. Mill Creek, after being closed last year, is open to the falls.

Barbour County: Sixteen miles of fishing along three streams give real promise, but don't overdo these holes, for the stocking is just getting a good start.

Hampshire County: Meadow Run is the only stream that should be fair for brook trout. The other streams have not been stocked long enough for large or adequate catches.

Preston County: Streams as a whole are not up to what they will be next year. You might try Daugherty Creek, open this year after being closed for three seasons, or big Wolfe Creek, which has been closed for the past two years.

Pendleton County: All trout streams are open, including the upper end of the South Branch. Because of the heavy stocking, fishing should be good from the Smokehole to the Virginia State line. More fish have wintered through in this section because there have been no big washouts this spring and the weather was mild through the cold months.

Berkeley County: For those who like the three and four year-olds (what stream fisherman doesn't) try Tuscarora and Mill Creek. It is said that these waters are for experienced anglers only.

Greenbrier County: Should be good in 1938. If you must fish it this year, try the South Fork of the Cherry River or Big Laurel and Big Rocky Creeks. Of these two the former holds the most promise. Others are Little Clear, from Route 60 to Coon's Branch, and Milligans Creek near Lewisburg.

Tucker County: One thousand feet down from the rim tumbles Blackwater River over canyon rocks. If you would like to try your skill, scramble down after the rainbows. Those babies are truly wise and champion fighters. If you prefer browns, try the lower Blackwater or the Cheat Rivers. Then there is Sandy Run, with plenty of bows that run from 9 to 13 inches.

Grant County: Try the North Fork and Stony River. Real experienced trouters have taken some beauties out of these waters.

In Pocahontas and Webster Counties the Cranberry and Williams Rivers run their course. Also in Webster is Sugar Creek, open in this county.

Monroe County: Turkey Creek is a good bet with a fine stocking of adult rainbows, and if you are good in the rough going over tough water there is the North Fork of Potts Creek, with its fine large brook trout.

Fayette County: Good on Laurel, Mann's and Glade Creeks. Don't forget to check in and out of Babcock State Park so that the commission can check and tabulate fishing conditions.

Mercer County: Heavily stocked with adult rainbows. Camp Creek should be exceptionally good.

Navy Coach Good As Prognosticator

Before leaving for the Army-Navy track meet on Saturday, Thomasen figured out the probable score. His calculations have the total as Navy, 68; Army, 58. The official score was exactly as he predicted.

Kelly Is Victor In Norwich Race

Norwich, Conn., May 31 (AP).—John A. Kelley, of Arlington, Mass., former winner of the Boston marathon and Olympic team member in 1936, won the national 15 kilometer marathon run here today. His time was 51 minutes and 1 second.

Kelley led a pack of 32 starters in the annual event including Robert Rankine, of Prescott, Ontario, defending champion, who was forced to abandon the race just before the twelfth mile owing to the heat.

Charles Town Feature Won By Scudder

Charles Town, W. Va., May 31.—Before the largest crowd ever to see racing at this track, 12,000 customers, J. B. Belk's Scudder drove to a two-length victory in the Decoration Day Purse, feature event of the holiday program. Scudder came down to the imaginary wire in advance of Claude Feltner's Emvee. Third money in the field of six was garnered by A. S. Hamilton jr.'s Never Idol.

Scudder's victory, which brought his heavy backing a $5.20 mutuel in the role of favorite, was the high point of a "field day for Jockey Palumbo. The little veteran had previously ridden both ends to a $85 daily double.

In addition to setting a new mark for attendance, the betting record for the four-year operation of the track went by the boards. The total wagering topped $175,000 as compared with $165,660 bet here last July 4.

Postponement was first to show in front when Starter Palmer gave the getaway signal for the mile and a sixteenth battle. Scudder and Emvee were in close attendance as the field passed the stands the first time. At the clubhouse turn, Palumbo gave Scudder some of his grip and the black colt responded to get to the front of Postponement. Emvee was still a forward factor and replaced Postponement as the runner-up as the field entered the back stretch. Palumbo was now pumping "with knees and elbows," Emvee was being pushed along briskly by Jockey Machado and from the rear of the field the red shirt of Jockey Joe Sherry on Never Idol, began to flash toward the leaders.

On the swing for the stretch Scudder kept up his pacemaking and it was now evident that neither Emvee or Never Idol could dislodge him. The three settled into Indian file in the stretch and stayed that way to the end.

CANTERET, hustled along on the outside to take command at the first turn, saved ground and was kept to a hard hand ride to the end. TWEETY raced on the outside of the winner throughout and was tiring gradually through the stretch. GOLD STREAK was in the thick of contention from the start and closed willingly. WORTHFUL went into the turn very wide and otherwise showed a good effort. The others showed nothing.

TOPSIE H., steadied along close to the pacemakers, saved ground at the final bend and responded to a hard drive to take command in the closing sixteenth. RUNNING WATER, closest to the pace of NORAS GRACE from the start, came to the outside to dispose of the mare, but could not resist the winner. REIGH TETRARCH, slow to get into best stride, gained sharply in the final stages and was going well at the end. NORAS GRACE was sprinted into the lead at once, set a good pace, but tired suddenly in the stretch. CANYNGE closed some ground. JUNE G. began stopping after 3 furlongs.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $83.00.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:19½. Winner, Mrs. E. L. Bull's br. g. TULEYRIES LAD, in tight quarters in the run to the first turn, was taken to the outside for racing room nearing the final turn, came inside of BOULDER DAM to take a brief lead and held on determinedly. BOULDER DAM raced CANTER BELLE into defeat and fought it out willingly. FERLIN was sent to the front under hustling tactics and tired gradually through the stretch. CANTER BELLE shuffled back at the break, closed full of run. YARDSTICK moved up menacingly on the swing for the stretch but weakened.

MISS TRYCOM, sent into a good lead at once, was hustled along throughout and was under a drive in the last furlong. SPEAR chased the winner from the start and showed a good effort. CROSSING OVER, within striking distance to the leaders from the start, rallied only mildly in the closing stages. ROSE MARIE B. closed some ground. MAEDERE dropped back after going forwardly for 3 furlongs. The others were not prominent.

SCUDDER, steadied along when outrun by POSTPONEMENT, took command after the opening quarter and held away thereafter under driving tactics. EMVEE, forwardly placed from the beginning, lugged out during the early running and closed gamely. NEVER IDOL was no match for POSTPONEMENT, but was sluggishly, gained sharply going to the far turn, but was tiring at the end. POSTPONEMENT outbroke the field to take the early lead, but weakened gradually after the opening quarter. ROUGH PLAYER and CANTJE had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:59½. Off at 5:59½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. HARD CHASE, rated along while closest to the pace of EDITH WALKER, rallied to a drive to wear down the leader and won going away. EDITH WALKER, sent to the front with a bold rush, opened a long lead under hustling tactics, but tired badly in the final three-sixteenths. SEA FINN gained ground gradually from a slow beginning. LADY DUNLIN closed willingly. TULEYRIES STAR had a rough trip.

LIGHT ACTION, forwardly placed from the start, came around BLACK RIBBON to take command and, under extreme pressure, outlasted BAV. The latter, steadied along and saving ground to the backstretch, went to the outside for racing room approaching the stretch, gained sharply on the winner and hung in the final 20 yards. BLACK RIBBON, ridden closely by PLAIN ACE while contesting for the pace, took a brief lead, but was tiring at the end. PAULINE H. gained ground gradually from a sluggish beginning. JORDAN ROSE had speed for a quarter while racing wide. PLAIN ACE was through early.

Towson Report On Washington In Demand

Banker Gives Complete Statistics Showing Gains Here.

By Gerald G. Gross

A Staff Correspondent.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 31.—Norman E. Towson, assistant treasurer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., is being deluged here with demands for copies of his annual report on commercial trade activities which he presented to the nineteenth annual convention of the D. C. Bankers Association.

Saturated with salient statistics, both local and national, Towson's address ran the gamut from freight car loadings and auto production to bond transactions and hotel occupancy. For Washington, he submitted figures for 1936 showing that:

Department store sales, as reported month by month, ranged 10 per cent or better above the corresponding months of the preceding year.

In consonance with a tendency apparent throughout the country, the volume of bond transactions on the Washington Stock Exchange declined from $1,117,400 for 1935 to $895,600 for 1936, while the number of shares of stock traded increased by about 40 per cent, or from 17,400 to 24,533.

Bank clearings increased by abou 20 per cent, the respective totals being $935,056,842 and $1,127,930,222.

Commercial and real estate loans by Washington banks on March 31, 1937, as compared with June 30, 1936, had increased by $6,348,000.

New building operations in Washington amounted to $27,098,890, while repairs and alterations brought the total up to $31,553,390. Permits issued included 2,030 dwellings and 564 apartments and flats for 4,067 families.

The National Capital, with the highest per capita use of telephones of any city in the world, had 219,389 instruments in service on April 30, 1937, as compared with 205,731 for the same date last year.

Hotel occupancy averaged 62 per cent of capacity in 1936, a 1 per cent improvement.

Nationally, Towson reported a slight decline in auto production in recent months, a falling off in freight car loadings and a total of 1,270 banks holding more than $1,000,000 each in Government bonds.

Banks Expand Public Service By Advertising

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 31.—"A concerted effort should be made during the coming year to bring about a better and clearer understanding of banking functions," Chairman Eliot H. Thomson, of the advertising committee, reported to the nineteenth annual convention of the D. C. Bankers Association.

Three co-operative advertising campaigns were conducted during the past year, he told the delegates. One was in keeping with a recommendation by Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, that banks give the fullest co-operation to veterans in handilng their bonus checks. Another featured the advantage of loans under provisions of title 1 of the national housing act and the third was the annual Christmas club campaign.

Results of all three newspaper advertising campaigns were gratifying, Dr. Thomson reported. The bonus check announcements in June "constituted a gesture of good will which brought forth many expressions of appreciation," he said.

The one on housing loans began on August 31 and "the public response as expressed by the increase in the number of loans made of this type was gratifying to the banks as well as to the Federal Housing Administration."

Christmas club advertising on November 30 and December 1 was followed by enrollment of 82,858 members, an increase of 8,551 over the previous year. The total subscribed was $7,343,050, which exceeded the 1935 club by $1,084,610.

Mrs. Sharpe Only Woman Speaker

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 31.—Mrs. Helen R. Sharpe, of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, was the only woman to present a report to the District bankers' convention.

As acting chairman of the safe deposit section, she reported on activities during the past year. Eighty delegates representing 20 banks served on the section and the meetings held from September to May, inclusive, drew an average attendance of 26.

"The outstanding event of the year," Mrs. Sharpe reported, "occurred in May, when we were host to the National Safe Deposit Convention. Under the able direction of Richard E. Harris, of the American Security & Trust Co., who headed the general convention committee, a most constructive and interesting program was presented."

Tellers Told They Are Cold To Customers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 31.—Bank tellers should substitute red, warm blood for the ice water in their veins.

That suggestion outnumbered all others in answers to a questionnaire sent out by Roland T. Carr, of Riggs National Bank, he reported in his prize winning essay which was read to the D. C. Bankers Association in convention here.

Given the subject, "How Can Employes Contribute to a Better Public Understanding of Banking?" in the annual essay contest of the American Institute of Banking, Carr sought to learn what doctors, scientists, businessmen and others had to say on the subject.

"It's a fine thing for you fellows to be surrounded by marble and glass and high walls and it probably has the awesome effect on the public that you want it to. Nobody wants you to change your bank architecture but it can do no harm to warm up some of the fellows inside the cages so that they don't get to look like just part of the scenery."

Other criticisms brought out in the brief survey included:

They are not well enough informed as to the functions of their banks.

They should be more alert for opportunities to sell the bank's services and to pass back to the management suggestions made by customers for improving those services.

They should recognize the fundamental complexity of banking transactions to the everage citizen.

Wheat Lower, Oats Strong At Winnipeg

By the Associated Press.

Winnipeg, May 31.—Wheat futures fluctuated irregularly on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, turning early 2-cent declines into 1-cent gains on speculative buying induced by Germany's bombardment of the Spanish port of Almeria, but continued weakness at Liverpool and dearth of export brought partial setbacks to close 1 to 1¾ cents lower with May at $1.23⅞; July, $1.21¾, and October, $1.12⅛ to $1.12¼.

Liberal support by firms with outside connections shot May and July oats futures 4⅛ to 4⅜ cents higher. Observers were unable to determine whether this buying was for domestic or export interests as May closed 60¾; July, 52⅝, and October 1⅝ cent lower at 41⅝.

Corby Cup New Golf Trophy For Bankers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 31.—Beginning next spring, District bankers will have a new golf cup to compete for at their conventions. A tall, handsome trophy, it will be known as the Karl W. Corby Memorial Cup.

The absence of Mr. Corby, late president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, was deeply felt at the meeting now coming to a close. Tribute to his memory was paid formally on the convention floor and nearly every speaker and committee chairman prefaced his remarks with an expression of regret at the untimely passing of the W. B. Hibbs & Co. partner.

Following is the resolution which was printed in the convention program:

The untimely death of Karl W. Corby, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, which occurred on February 4, 1937, ended a life of achievement and usefulness and brought deep sorrow to the hearts of its members.

Mr. Corby, a native son, was born on the 5th day of December, 1893. His education was received in preparatory schools and at the University of Pennsylvania, where he graduated from the Wharton School of Finance. Thus equipped, he entered upon an active business career and at the time of his death was general manager in the brokerage business of W. B. Hibbs & Co., vice president of the Washington Stock Exchange and a director of the Riggs National Bank.

Notwithstanding the manifold duties of his business life, he contributed liberally of his time and talents to charitable and philanthropic undertakings. In addition to many other activities of this character, he was president of the board of trustees of the Emergency Hospital and trustee of George Washington University, promoting their progress through his energy, sound judgment and business acumen.

He served as chairman of many committees in the association and prior to his elevation to the presidency held the offices of secretary, second vice president and first vice president. During his term as president, his work was so well planned that the association continued to operate successfully even during his illness, so that his presence was constantly felt by all of the members.

Therefore, be it resolved, That in the death of Karl W. Corby, the District of Columbia and the State of Maryland, where he resided, have lost one of their foremost citizens, whose untiring zeal in the field of public and private endeavor contributed much to the advancement and welfare of their people.

That we, the members of this association, have lost a true and loyal friend whose qualities of heart and mind so endeared him to us that his memory will ever be cherished with genuine affection and lasting respect.

Cotton Declines At New Orleans

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, May 31.—Desultory selling and lack of sustaining support caused a decline of approximately 50 cents a bale in cotton here today. Favorable weather advices and disappointing foreign markets were the main factors behind the easiness.

July sold off to 12.56, October to 12.60 and December to 12.66, or 10 points below the previous close. January and March contracts remained at their opening figures. The market fluctuated quietly near the lowest in final trading and closed steady at net declines of 9 to 10 points for the day.

Most Banks Not Disturbed By U.S.Lending

By Thomas M. Cahill.

The committee on banking studies of the American Bankers Association is of the opinion that the question of competition with banks from Federally sponsored lending agencies is a local matter and banks generallly are not greatly disturbed by it. This is revealed in a report by the committe of which Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier, Hamilton National Bank, is a member.

The document presents factual material on all Federal lending agencies and the result of a questionnaire by States distributed through the State bankers organizations. It finds that competition in the agricultural production credit field is strong enough in many rural areas to warrant effort on the part of local banks to meet it.

It finds further that certain types of production loans because of their long maturities, or uncertain collateral, have not been universally acceptable as bank assets particularly during the uncertainty of the past few years, but it also states that here production credit associations have filled a gap in the credit structure. The report reminds, however, that this does not obscure the fact that many commercial banks in agricultural areas have not been fully alive to their opportunities in determining and meeting the credit requirements of farms in their communities.

The committee reports it has no further program to follow in studying Government lending agencies but will assist in advising State or county associations which desire to continue the subject further and request its assistance.

Miss Jennie Reynolds, of 628 Webster street northwest, recently completed 25 years service with Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., and was honored by President William Montgomery, of the company, who, in the presence of a group of officers and fellow employes of Miss Reynolds at the company's home office, presented her with a bouquet of 25 roses. Miss Reynolds is the oldest employe of the company in point of service, only two officers having a longer record. They are Mr. Montgomery, who became the company's sole employe in 1892, and Dr. John B. Nichols, medical director, who has been with the company since 1902.

MISS REYNOLDS.

Life Insurance Sales.

Life insurance sales here during April advanced 15 per cent over those of the month last year, the report from the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn., reveals. The national gain was 16 per cent. Local underwriters handled $7,571,000 worth of new business in April, bringing the aggregate for the four months to $27,499,000, an increase of 15 per cent from the corresponding period last year.

Eighty-three per cent of the companies in business here reported gains over April, 1936. Washington was bettered by Cleveland and Philadelphia only. Maryland's gain was 23 per cent and Virginia's business was up 9 per cent. North Carolina's sales arose 4 per cent, while West Virginia's receded 2 per cent. South Carolina was 17 per cent ahead of April 1936.

Mortgage Rates.

Mortgage interest rates, regardless of the general money trend, are likely to continue low with the average rate for the country as a whole for the remainder of the year approximately 5.19 per cent, according to a survey by the Mortgage Bankers Association of America made from data supplied by its members in 41 States and announced by George H. Patterson, secretary. Average mortgage interest rate for the Eastern States will be 5 per cent; for the Southern States 5.33 per cent; for the Far Western and Mountain States 5.35 per cent, and for the Middle Western States 5.11 per cent. A country-wide average of 5.19 per cent, according to the association's data.

That very little change either up or down can be expected in this rate of slightly more than 5 per cent is seen from the fact that 90 per cent of the membership replying stated that they do not believe a lower rate can be expected, while 83 per cent expressed the opinion they do not look for higher rates, according to Mr. Patterson. Of the 17 per cent who forsee higher rates, none expect a rise of more than one-half of 1 per cent, he said.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 31.—The stock exchange closed weak today, with all sections generally lower. Tense Spanish developments and the American holiday, which checked trading in transatlantics, unsettled the market. British and German bonds sold off. Industrials declined, and Paris sold oil and gold mining shares, which depressed that section. Copper and tin mining stocks eased following a decline in those metals, and rubber shares were lower with the the commodity. Transatlantics drooped.

Paris.—Heavy selling took place in the bourse today. Traders were depressed over the Spanish situation and absorbed large losses. Rentes lost 20@90 centimes. International issues were irregularly lower.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed 3½@4¼d lower under free liquidation in the absence of continental demand and United Kingdom inquiry, and in response to Saturday's lower North American markets. Cotton futures closed quiet, 9@10 points lower. Scattered selling and lack of demand depressed prices.

Sellers Honors Academy Class At Garden Fete

Mrs. Roosevelt Receives at 'Ring Dance' at Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., May 31.—Midshipmen of the graduating class were the guests of Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Naval Academy, at a garden party tonight, as members of the next two lower classes danced in Memorial Hall and the gymnasium.

Garden Is Decorated.

The garden of the superintendent's quarters was decorated with Chinese lanterns, under which the graduates, their parents and sweethearts danced and chatted. Admiral and Mrs. Sellers received their guests in the main hall of their home.

The "ring dance" which the second classmen had looked forward to for three years was held in Memorial Hall. Mrs. Roosevelt, who was aided in receiving by Midshipmen George Dalton, looked on as the traditional ritual of the Academy was followed. As each member of the class passed through a huge ring, the girl he brought to the dance slipped the class ring on his finger and the couple kissed.

The day's activities, which drew a crowd of about 6,000 June Week visitors, began with a rehearsal of the presentation of colors dress parade that will be held at 5 p. m. tomorrow. Miss Janet Cunneen, Washington "color girl," made her first public appearance. She wore a costume of canary yellow and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Midshipmen Parade.

The visitors hurried from the rehearsal to the Thompson Stadium where at noon the regiment formed to watch 216 athletes receive their letters and other trophies from Admiral Sellers.

Eighty-nine seniors, 75 juniors and 52 sophomores received the coveted "N's" or "N-stars," the latter given to an athlete who participated in a victory over the Army. Seventy-five "N-stars" were awarded, 25 in football, 19 in track, 11 in basketball, 10 in gymnasium and 10 in fencing.

Frank C. Lynch, jr., Kansas City, Mo., football tackle, basketball center and weight and javelin thrower, was awarded three "N-stars." William T. Ingram 2d, Culver, Ind., won two "N-stars," in football and basketball and an "N" in baseball. On Wednesday he will receive the Navy Athletic Association sword for personal excellence in athletics.

Adams Cup Awarded.

Admiral Sellers gave the Adams Cup to A. B. Yeates, jr., Norfolk, Va., captain of the Navy crew squad which on Saturday won the Eastern sprint championship. The Admiral said the crew was "one of the best in the history of the Academy." John Montgomery Ballinger, of Hearne, Tex., was presented a gold watch, class of 1928 prize, for having done the most to promote football while a member of the football "B" squad.

The academy authorities announced the 28 members of the graduating class who will graduate with distinction. In the order of class standing, they are:

Wages-Hour Bill Is Indorsed By Grocery Manufacturers

'Social Objectives' of Connery-Black Measure Approved, But Group Warns Draft Must Be 'Economically Workable.'

Hot Springs, Va., May 31 (AP).—The Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America at their midyear meeting here today indorsed the "social objectives" of the Connery-Black wages and hours bill, but cautioned Congress that the bill must be drawn "to make it economically workable."

Members of the A. G. M. A. today reaffirmed the association's survey showing that their total employment and pay rolls have increased steadily and today are at the highest point in their history.

The association pointed out to Congress that "unless the wages and hours bill is drawn so as to conform to fundamental economics, it cannot achieve its social purpose."

In a resolution voted today the association declared "we believe that there should be national legislation having the four objectives of prohibiting child labor, oppressive working hours, starvation wages and sweatshops. Therefore we approve the objectives of the Connery-Black wages and hours bill accordingly, in its conception as a social measure and as a part of a broad program of national social legislation.

"But we also believe that this bill is formally defective," the resolution continued, "because and to the extent it contains provisions which appear to be fundamentally unsound. And we further believe it necessary to point out in this connection that the bill should contain provisions which will preclude an uneconomic administration and application which would defeat its social purpose.

"Mindful of its public responsibility in this situation, the association has appointed a committee to present a constructive analysis to Congress in pursuance of the foregoing statements of belief."

The association's members include the leading food and grocery manufacturers of the country with an annual business exceeding four billion dollars and providing employment for approximately one million adult workers. The association members employ no child labor.

Willis said members at today's meeting advocated repeal of the capital gains tax and "necessary modifications of the undivided corporate earning tax.

Rep. Colmer Stresses Aid to Living Veterans

Fredericksburg, Va., May 31 (AP).—Tributes to soldier dead should not obscure provisions for the "just deserts" of living veterans, Representative William M. Colmer (Democrat), Mississippi, said in memorial exercises attended by other Congressmen at Confederate and Federal cemeteries here.

"It is fitting that we honor our soldier dead," he said, "but I also contend that it is our obligation to give veterans their just deserts while they are living."

Cold Cuts Profits Of Berry Growers

Painter, Va., May 31 (AP).—Cool weather which retarded the ripening of early berries was reflected in reduced profits today for Eastern Shore strawberry growers as the season came to a close, except at a few points in northern Accomac County.

7 Councilmen Of Warrenton Refuse to File

Withdraw as Candidates After Criticism of Election Methods.

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., May 31.—The Town of Warrenton needed today seven candidates for its councilmanic election of June 8.

The seven incumbent councilmen, unopposed for re-election, have announced their withdrawal.

"While we have been perfectly willing to act as councilmen under the assumption that these were posts of service, we definitely are not candidates in a political sense," they wrote in a statement published in the Fauquier Democrat, local newspaper.

"Inasmuch as the actions of the mayor and council in connection with the election have been criticized, it appears that our position should be made clear. Our conception of service as councilmen is at such variance with the political flavor of ideas expressed in letters to the local press, the actual willingness to yield the posts in such contrast with the pictured tenacity with which they are held, that it seems the genuineness of our position can best be evidenced by withdrawal of our names as candidates. This we do herewith."

If the councilmen carry out their announced intention, observers predicted names may be written in for the seven seats, as has been done in the past two elections when the incumbent mayor, Thomas E. Frank, did not file for re-election.

Wright May Get Cuba Appointment

By the United Press.

Nomination of J. Butler Wright, now United States Minister to Czechoslovakia, as Ambassador to Cuba, will be sent to the Senate for confirmation by President Roosevelt shortly, the United Press was informed last night.

Wright will succeed Jefferson Caffery, who is replacing Hugh Gibson as American Ambassador to Brazil. The changes are expected to be effected around the middle of June.

Wright, 49-year-old career diplomat, has been in the United States foreign service since 1909, when he was appointed secretary of the American legation at Tegucigalpa, Honduras. Subsequently, he served in the lower grades of the foreign service in Rumania, Serbia, Bulgaria, Belgium, The Netherlands, Brazil, Russia and England.

In 1924 he was promoted to Assistant Secretary of State. He held that post until 1927, when he was appointed Minister to Hungary, and in 1930 became Minister to Uruguay where he served until 1934, when he assumed his present post.

Pope Studies Spanish Crisis, Cancels Plans

Postponement of Address Assailing Reich Hinted Due to War Threat.

By the Associated Press.

Castel Gondolfo, May 31.—Pope Piux XI was believed tonight to be giving serious attention to the Spanish war crisis after canceling plans for celebration of his eightieth birthday today.

The official explanation for postponement of inauguration of the new pontifical academy at which the pontiff planned to make a world radio broadcast was that his personal physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, urged him not to overtax himself.

Some Vatican circles, however, said the Pope may have been alarmed at the Spanish situation. They believed that in the prepared address the Pope had made some points against Germany in the Nazi church controversy.

With tenseness resulting from the German shelling of Almeria, a speech against Germany might have been taken to indicate the Holy See was siding with the Spanish government, it was stated.

Nazi Members Absent.

One reason suggested for the cancellation of ceremonies was that none of the five German members of the academy, all of them noted scientists, had come for the inauguration.

It was not known whether the German members themselves had decided not to attend or whether they had been prevented from leaving Germany for the event, which some Vatican circles said might have been possible in view of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' address Friday charging a "general decadence of morals" among the Catholic clergy.

It was regarded as significant that the Pope's address, on science and religion, was canceled and that no arrangements had been made for its subsequent broadcast or publication. Inauguration of the academy was postponed to tomorrow, when Cardinal Pacelli will preside instead of the Pope.

Pope Reported Well.

Even the prelates who gave out the official explanation for cancellation of the inauguration said the state of the Pope's health did not arouse any anxiety.

The Vatican newspaper Observatore Romano said: "The Holy Father, although well but not wishing to abuse the condition which the Lord granted him, believed it advisable to give up personal inauguration of the pontificial academy."

In the afternoon, the Pontiff took a 90-minute drive through the villa gardens in his reconstructed automobile. During the day he received dozens of Vatican officials who came to offer their congratulations.

Chief among them was Cardinal Pignatelli di Belmonte, dean of the Sacred College and himself 86 years old. The cardinal wished the Pope in Latin "ad multos annos," or long life, in behalf of all the cardinals.

Among the mass of telegrams of congratulation received by the Pope was one from King Vittorio Emanuele. Flowers came from all parts of the world. One was a bouquet from the papal duchess, the former Mrs. Nicholas Brady, now wife of the Irish minister to the Vatican, William Macauley.

Rileyville Couple 63 Years Married: War Deeds Retold

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rileyville, Va., May 31.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis Lovett Heiskell this year celebrated their sixty-third wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Heiskell, formerly Miss Sue Pittman, daughter of one of Stonewall Jackson's famous scouts, rendered the South valuable service during the Civil War.

Her husband, Francis Heiskell, now 89, was too young to enlist, but he is proud of the service his wife did. They have one son, Frank Heiskell, who distinguished himself in the World War. Mrs. Heiskell is 91.

"I was 15 when John Brown made his raid," she said, "and those times are engraved on my memory."

Her most daring exploit is being preserved as a part of the history of this region. At that time she and some of her family were living on Main street in Luray, across from the Mansion Inn, one of the oldest buildings there.

"The Yankee medical supplies were stored right beneath us in a store building, especially quantities of quinine, and our people and soldiers needed them. With a colored servant we climbed down the stairway when the soldiers were at a dance, climbed in through the window and carried away stores of supplies, making several trips.

"We didn't know what to do with them, but finally took up some planks in an old outbuilding and hid them until we could get them to the doctors. I never told my mother because she might have said it was stealing, but I think it was all right."

The young men in the publicity department at N. B. C., turned over a new sheet of the calendar and found that June—commencement month—was at hand once again. A spy was sent out to contact some of the network's brightest stars, to learn what June and commencement week for Young America might recall to their minds. Here is a partial score:

Il Duce Quits Patrol, Holds Ships Ready

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 31.—Italy today withdrew her warships from the international neutrality patrol of Spanish waters, but left the vessels off the Spanish coast ready to defend themselves "if attacked."

High Fascist circles said withdrawal from the European nonintervention committee, ordered by Premier Mussolini, does not mean the vessels will return to their home ports.

Joining Germany in stepping out of the organization set up to prevent foreign intervention in the Spanish civil war, Italy demanded full satisfaction for the bombing of the Italian auxiliary naval ship Barletta off the port of Palma and the death of six of her officers. Il Duce also asked guarantees against repetitions of such attacks.

Political and diplomatic circles regarded the situation as tense.

Fascist sources characterized the German bombardment of the Spanish government port of Almeria as a "legitimate reprisal" for bombing of the pocket battleship Deutschland, and said Italy was "in agreement" and solidly behind Germany "in her whole attitude."

Italian ships were not given orders to make reprisals for the bombing of the Barletta, it was stated.

It was indicated, however, if Italian ships "are further attacked," they may then "do what the German ships did."

The official communique announcing Italy's withdrawal from the nonintervention committee said "repeated attacks" by Spanish Valencia government planes on Italian and German ships shows a "premeditated plan of aggression." (Italy and Germany recognize Spanish insurgents as the legal regime in Spain.)

Italian Sub Sank Ship, Belief.

In an official statement the government declared 50 passengers were drowned and several were injured when the ship was torpedoed and sent to the bottom yesterday.

The attack came, the statement said, after another merchant ship escaped a previous torpedo attack in which one of the torpedoes went aground on Calella beach.

"At 3 p. m. the same day, the submarine, still in Spanish waters near Malgrat, attacked the motorship Ciudad de Barcelona, which sank in less than an hour," the statement added.

Russia May Back Britain.

Moscow, May 31 (AP).—The Russian government, sympathetic to the Spanish Madrid-Valencia republic, awaited detailed information tonight on the German bombardment of Almeria.

There was no official indication of Russia's probable action, but unofficial sources said the Soviet regime would align itself with France and Britain. (Both these nations were reported tonight considering a new neutrality pledge arrangement to confine the civil war to Spain.)

Bank Supervisors Urge Consolidation

By the United Press.

Luther A. Harr, executive committee chairman of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks, said last night his organization is sponsoring a survey looking toward consolidation, merger and actual migration of banks to provide greater strength to the banking structure and better service.

Harr, who is also Pennsylvania State banking secretary, said the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation will co-operate in the survey.

Harr said State bank supervisors throughout the country agree that in many communities two banks are "starving to death" where one bank could enjoy a profitable existence.

"If both banks continue operations in such a community, both ultimately would fail with the consequent disaster," he said.

Mrs. E. R. Menafee To Take State Post

Baltimore, May 31 (AP).—William Milnes Maloy, chief executive director of the State Unemployment Insurance Division, said today that Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menafee, of Cumberland, will assume her position in the public relations department of the organization.

Mrs. Menafee declined to comment on the possibility she would resign as Democratic National Committeewoman from Maryland to accept the public office. A statutory regulation provides that no person holding a party office may be appointed to a job with a State agency.

Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt Returns to New York

New York, May 31 (AP).—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt arrived from Europe today aboard the liner Normandie still undecided whether she would continue her legal battle for permanent custody of her daughter, Gloria.

Under a Supreme Court decree she will regain the child June 6 for a period of six weeks. She shares partial cstody of the child with little Gloria's aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Mrs. Rhode Defends Women in Official Life

Columbia, Mo., May 31 (AP).—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rhode, former United States Minister to Denmark, said here today women who participate in governmental and international affairs are "simply discharging woman's responsibility to the family."

Isle of Iviza for 3 Centuries Base for Raids on Spain Coast

Romans, Carthaginians, Phoenicians and Pirates Used Strategic Harbor, Now Menacing French Communications With Africa.

By the Associated Press.

Iviza, scene of the bombing of the German cruiser Deutschland, has been a key point in Mediterranean warfare for nearly 3,000 years.

Barbary pirates, Romans, Carthaginians and Phoenicians all used this tiny island—scarcely 25 miles long—as a base for raids on the Spanish coast 50 miles away.

Its strategic importance has risen swiftly since the World War because ite two splendid harbors, ideal for sheltering submarines, lies squarely athwart France's line of communication with her colonial empire.

French military experts have asserted a few submarines stationed there could cut them off from their vast reserves of African manpower.

At the outbreak of the Spanish civil war, Iviza's garrison of about 50 men promptly declared for the insurgents. Barcelona troops captured the island a few weeks later, but it was almost immediatley retaken by an insurgent force largely composed of Italians.

Private reports from Iviza have related 400 loyalist sympathizers were herded into the great hall of a medieval castle overlooking the main harbor and executed with machine guns poked through the windows.

Normally a drowsy, sun-seared strip of sandy hills, the island has almost no contact with the outside world. Few of its 24,000 inhabitants speak Spanish, since they have inherited their own dialect from the Phoenicians who settled Iviza long before the Christian era.

Archaeologists have long been interested in the island, because of its wealth of ancient ruins. Broken Roman columns have been built into the walls of many peasant homes, and Roman coins still pass as good currency in a few isolated village markets.

German Shells Wreck Almeria, Leave 100 Dead

"Many of those who were victims of this horrible attack had narrowly escaped death at Malaga, where they were machine-gunned and bombed by Italian airplanes as they fled along the coast road toward Almeria."

The death toll would have run into the thousands, it was explained, but for a false alarm sounded at 1 a. m. to announce an air raid.

Because of the mild climate along the Mediterranean coast most of the buildings of Almeria, built of stucco and light brick, had no foundations and collapsed like cards under the big German shells.

After reducing Almeria to ruins the five German warships withdrew and fired on several Loyalist trawlers sweeping away rebel mines planted along the Mediterranean coast.

An official of the Valencia government, watching rescue squads digging bodies from the ruins, said:

"This is an act of war. We are prepared to defend ourselves. Germany finally has come out into the open."

Carolina Youth Held in Wife's Torch Murder

By the Associated Press.

Morganton, N. C., May 31.—Ervin A. Stamey, 22-year-old jobless filling station worker, was charged with murder today in connection with the death of his 20-year-old wife, whose lifeless body was found in a blazing bed at their home shortly after midnight Saturday.

Sheriff Fred W. Ross, who swore out a warrant "on information and belief," declined to say what reason he had for placing the charge against Stamey who, the officer said, asserted he had nothing to do with the death of his wife.

Ross said an examination showed that Mrs. Stamey, mother of two small children and worker in a textile mill at Drexel near here, had been struck a severe blow in the back of the head and was dead before the bed was set afire.

Conley Stamey, brother-in-law of the victim, reported finding the body in the burning bed shortly after midnight. In the room were Betty Jean, 4-year-old daughter of the dead woman, who was asleep in a crib, and Royce Ervin, 8-month-old son.

operate to achieve an armistice in the Spanish civil war—provided Germany regards her national honor now vindicated and is willing to enter discussions with Great Britain, France and Italy.

German citizenry as a whole was greatly stirred by the rapid sequence of events.

Their first was deep resentment over the Deutschland incident, then pride that the "insult" had been avenged.

Crowds gathered before the foreign office and the Reichs-Chancellery Flags were at half-staff for the Deutschland dead. Naval bluejackets replaced soldiers as Reichs-Chancellery guardsmen.

By coincidence, the "avenging of German honor" by bombardment of Almeria coincided with services today commemorating the Battle of Jutland—great naval conflict in the World War.

Geneva, May 31 (AP).—The Spanish government, in an official note to the League of Nations, charged Germany tonight with committing "acts of aggression against Spanish ports and vessels."

The note, delivered to Secretary-General Joseph A. C. Avenol by Julio Alvarez del Vayo, reiterated the Spanish government's assertion the German pocket battleship Deutschland provoked the bomb attack Saturday by Spanish airplanes by firing first.

Germany's retaliatory bombardment of Almeria today was termed "the greatest outrage against an independent sovereign state of all the acts of aggression committed by the German fleet since the Reich, contrary to all rules of international law and obligations rising from the declaration of nonintervention, has been guilty of war-like intervention in the conflict in Spain."

"In view of the exceptional gravity of this act, decided upon by the Reich after long deiberation, and in view also of the official pronouncement of the dispatch of further German warships to the Mediterranean, the Spanish government feels it is its urgent duty to draw your attention to this situation."

The Spanish note charged Germany took advantage of the fact hers was the only fleet assigned to a particular Mediterranean zone, "to carry on acts of aggression against Spanish ports and vessels."

It said that by visiting Iviza, Balearic Island port where the Deutschland bombing occurred, German ships were outside their own zone and were visiting an insurgent-held port "which is a well-known center of insurgent activity."

avert collapse of the Spanish neutrality accord.

Designed to bring Italy and Germany back into the London nonintervention committee, the plan was said to require an agreement among the neutral countries and the two Spanish combatants. The agreement would be a guarantee against further incidents such as the bombing of the German pocket battleship Deutschland.

Security zones where foreign ships would be free from attack in Spanish waters by either insurgent or government forces would be created.

To speed acceptance of the proposal, it was suggested that France, England, Germany and Italy ask the approval of the Spanish government at Valencia and the Insurgent command at Salamanca.

Blum Calls, Hurried Parley

Consideration of the proposal was the outcome of hurried discussions between French and British diplomats. Premier Blum called representatives of the British and Soviet governments into conference immediately on learning a German fleet had opened fire on Almeria in retaliation for the attack on the Deutschland.

Yvon Delbos, minister of foreign affairs, tonight held a conference with Count Johannes von Welczeck, German Ambassador, and told him this was no time to abandon the nonintervention committee if it was hoped to prevent the Spanish war from spreading to the rest of Europe.

Officials reported the German Ambassador was favorable to the proposals for a security plan which would satisfy German demands for guarantees against further incidents like the bombing of the Deutschland.

German and Italian abandonment of the non-intervention patrol, however, caused complications which officials acknowledged might wreck the entire neutrality machinery.

French government "denies most categorically certain reports that officers of the French army participated or plan to participate in operations in Spain" made plain the foreign office intention of adhering to non-intervention.

French Steamer Halted.

The navy ministry announced almost simultaneously the French steamer Finistere was halted yesterday by the insurgent armed trawler "Pedro I" about 10 miles off Majorca. The French destroyer Simoun came to the Finistere's aid, escorting her while the trawler retired, the announcement said.

The combined Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets will leave Brest tomorrow for joint maneuvers on the high seas, the ministry disclosed. After a brief training period the Mediterranean fleet will proceed to the West African coast and then return to Toulon, it was stated.

The ministry insisted the mass ship movements were planned two months ago and were not connected with Spanish incidents.

When informed of the bombing of the Deutschland and Germany's subsequent reprisal, French officials declared the Deutschland had no business at Iviza and it was the province of the French fleet to patrol the island.

They also declared the Deutschland was not in the service of the non-intervention committee at the time she was bombed, so the committee would not be required to take action.

Legion Ball Players To See Sports Films

Two films of the country's outstanding ball players will be shown in Pythian Temple at 9 o'clock tonight, with the 120 members of the American Legion junior ball teams as the audience. The showing was arranged by Charles Kohen, manager of the team that wears the colors of the Vincent B. Costello Post of the Legion.

tion agreement" which provides that this area is in the French patrolling zone and that none of the 27 participating nations in the agreement is to operate ships within 10 miles of the shoreline nor is to use any Spanish port as bases.

"It is clear," the statement said, "that the government in pursuing its struggle against its Fascist enemies, must do all in its power to destroy enemy bases. If German or Italian ships are anchored in enemy base ports in violation of the nonintervention agreement, they cannot expect immunity from government attacks upon those ports.

In reference to the German argument that the Deutschland did not fire on the planes, he said, "It is not surprising that having failed to shoot down the fighting planes of the Spanish government the Germans should seek to save the reputation of their anti-aircraft guns by pretending they did not fire."

De los Rios, the ambassador, who is expected to arrive tomorrow by plane, has a mother and a brother living in Almeria. The city, embassy officials said, ordinarily has a population of about 50,000, which is now swollen to about 100,000 by refugees from other cities. The officials noted sarcastically that the Germans did not shell Cartagena, a fortified port, but chose the "defenseless" Almeria.

Senator Borah, in commenting on the incident, said:

"With dictatorships, war is always an immediate possibility. Dictators look upon people as so much fuel to feed the war furnace. It is our duty to remain completely aloof. We should keep entirely free from all controversies.

"Under dictatorships the citizen must always go where he is sent. He has no choice. He must fight the battles of his masters regardless of his own wishes.

Representative Sam McReynolds, of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said: "It behooves us to keep our feet on the ground and avoid entanglements or acts that would involve us."

De la Casa noted that the latest cables from his government said that 19 persons, including five women and one child, were killed in the German naval bombardment of Almeria, and that 55 were injured. Thirty-nine buildings were destroyed.

Concern Evident.

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 31 (AP).—Concern over the latest Spanish-German events was evident in temporary White House circles here today as President Roosevelt kept in constant touch with Washington seeking news on every development.

While official comment was withheld, it was said the President was in communication with the State Department. He remained within the confines of his Hyde Park country estate nearly all day for that purpose.

It was indicated the President read with anxiety reports of the German shelling of the Spanish port of Almeria; of Saturday's attack by Spanish planes on the Deutschland, and news of the withdrawal by Germany and Italy from the European neutrality committee.

Between the receipt of departmental reports, the President worked on official mail. His message on tax evasion was expected to be sent to Congress tomorrow from Washington.

Late in the day he took time out to act as host to White House newspapermen and photographers at a picnic beside the outdoor pool at his Val-Kil cottage about a mile from his Hyde Park estate.

In the past, the fighting services have not approved the selections unless they were satisfied with the rest of the cabinet. Thus the army and navy are in a position to hold up formation of a new government for some time.
